Would that we all could sit down to dinner today with the youngsters at the Christ Child Convalescent Home in Rockville, Md., there to watch the heart-felt thankfulness of smiling children who rely on us for the things that make them happy. Our joy would be in knowing that our gift to the Community Chest had helped to put them on the road to better health. All of us can't be there for dinner, but let's keep the picture in mind and give to the Chest today. (Story on Page 27)

Call Is Answered

By the Associated Press

Cairo (Thursday), Nov. 20. Armed plentifully with American weapons manned by some 750,000 imperial troops plus the Royal Navy, the British have opened a new triple-threat offensive by land, sea and air against the Axis in Libya.

The aims of the attack coordinating massed air attacks, a land thrust already beyond 50 miles deep into Libya and the pounding of naval guns against shore objectives are:

1. A diversion of Axis strength for Russia.
2. Cleaning the Axis finally out of North Africa, and
3. Eventually knocking Italy out of the war from Mediterranean coastal bases.

The Imperial Army swept into eastern Libya from Egypt's western desert at dawn Tuesday in a campaign that was so closely guarded a secret that no hint of it leaked out until an official announcement last night.

Already, the British said today, they have advanced on a 140-mile front more than 50 miles into enemy territory, have taken many German prisoners, put Italian troops to flight, subjected the stubborn Hellfire (Halfaya) Pass to a heavy naval bombardment and wrought "tremendous damage to the enemy" with continuing air attacks on German-Italian positions and airdromes at Tmimi, Derna, Martuba, Agedabia, Bomba and Bengasi.

[The British smashed into two German armored forces between Bardia and Tobruk and one Italian armored force south of Tobruk, a United Press dispatch said. The British advance was so swift that enemy forces were dispersed in disorder when struck.]

American-made Marylands, Tomahawks and Bostons were in the British vanguard, along with British Blenheims, Wellingtons, Hurricanes, Albacores and Beaufighters.

Dispatches said the Beaufighters almost immediately shot down seven Axis troop-carrying planes in flames in the Martuba area.

Bomb aimers said German-Italian motor transports which slowed or stuck in sandy stretches proved easy targets.

All land, air and naval forces taking part in the drive had a message from Prime Minister Churchill read

Vichy Officials Silent

Weygand Breaks With Petain; Ouster Laid to Hitler Pressure

By the Associated Press

Vichy, Nov. 19.—Gen. Maxime Weygand, the military enigma of France, was reported tonight to have come to the parting of the ways with Vichy government and to have resigned as Marshal Petain's representative and army commander in North Africa.

(Diplomatic informants in Washington said they had received authoritative confirmation that Weygand had been ousted, presumably as the result of increased authority of German collaborationist elements in the Vichy government.)

Spokesmen insisted that Weygand's case was not mentioned in recent conversations between Petain and Otto Abetz, Adolf Hitler's ambassador to Paris, but the fact remained that Weygand came from French Africa soon after the Abetz visit to Vichy.

There may be an official announcement about Weygand tomorrow.

U. S., Mexico Agree to Settle Old Disputes

Sign Pact Providing Credit for Road System, Funds for Americans

By Hedley Donovan
Post Staff Writer

The United States and Mexico yesterday signed a far-reaching agreement designed to speed settlement of their long-standing dispute over expropriated oil properties, awarding forty million dollars to American citizens for a variety of other claims against Mexico and granting Mexico a thirty million dollar credit at the Export-Import Bank for development of her highway system.

Mexico Deposits 9 Millions

The agreement also includes a decision "in principle" to commence negotiations for a Mexican-American reciprocal trade treaty.

Under the agreement, the Treasury Department will undertake to stabilize the rate of currency exchange between the two nations through dollar purchases of Mexican pesos and will resume direct purchase from the Mexican treasury of newly mined silver.

Secretary of State Hull yesterday hailed the agreement as a "new milestone" in Pan-American solidarity.

Sections of the agreement dealing with American oil properties in Mexico, whose seizure by the Cardenas regime has plagued Mexican-American relations since 1938, provide for the appointment by each government of an expert to work out a "just compensation" for the American oil companies. Mexico yesterday made a nine million dollar deposit on account.

Section Can Be Voided

Estimates of the value of the American-owned oil properties in Mexico have ranged from 15 million to 250 million. Oil men have recently reported a margin of about 70 million between their own valuation of the properties and the Mexican figure.

Yesterday's agreement provides that if the Mexican and American experts concur on a figure, it must be reported to the governments within five months and will be re-

Tokyo Weighs Hull Program For Far East

Four-Point Proposal Submitted; 'Peace Negotiations' Slowed

By Wilfrid Fleisher
Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

The American-Japanese talks were interrupted yesterday while Japan's two envoys in Washington awaited instructions from their government in reply to a four-point program laid before them Tuesday by Cordell Hull, Secretary of State, as a basis for a general settlement of Pacific problems.

It was reliably learned that the program which Hull presented to Saburo Kurusu, Japan's special envoy to the United States, and Admiral Kichisaburo Nomura, the Japanese Ambassador, in the course of a three-hour meeting at the State Department, was as follows:

1. Japan to withdraw from the Axis.
2. Renunciation of further Japanese aggression.
3. Withdrawal of Japanese forces from both China and Indo-China.
4. Nondiscrimination in trade and respect for the principle of equal commercial opportunity for all nations throughout the Pacific area.

It is understood further that Hull indicated to the two envoys that the United States seeks a general Pacific settlement and is not interested in any temporary agreement which would result only in a postponement of the issues at stake.

The next step is now up to the Japanese government, which is called upon to decide whether it will accept Hull's points as a basis of negotiation or whether it will reject them. A continuation of the Washington conversations is dependent on Japan's answer.

In view of the importance of the Japanese decision, it may be delayed for a day or two. Late last night the Japanese Embassy had made no request to the State Department for a new appointment for the two Japanese envoys. Hull said at noon that he expected no formal meeting yesterday, but that an informal

Capital City Renders Thanks In Home and Church Today

As Thanksgiving is commemorated in homes and churches today, Washingtonians will express in words and deeds their heartfelt gratitude for a war-free land and other blessings.

Citizens will go to church to pray for personal, community and national blessings, and they will bring food, clothing and cash for the less fortunate here and abroad.

And as they pray, many of the churches of various denominations will worship together at neighborhood services in all parts of Washington, Maryland and Virginia.

As citizens sit down to their Thanksgiving dinners, many will have the happy knowledge that their financial aid of the Central Union Mission, Gospel Mission and other institutions will be brightening an otherwise gloomy day for hundreds of wayfarers.

Nor have Washingtonians forgotten the men in the front line of national defense, for plans have been made to entertain soldiers at dinner and other functions. And many churchmen will have soldiers as guests at Thanksgiving church services.

President Roosevelt may feast on a pedigreed turkey whose feet have never touched the ground when the Chief Executive sits down to dine with his wife and his son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. James Roosevelt. White House attaches refused to say which one of five holi-

Penny-Milk Group Gets 'Date' For Submission of Program

A Federally sponsored 1-cent milk program for undernourished children, laboriously struggling toward establishment in Washington, moved a step forward yesterday.

Chairman Robert L. Haycock of the special city-wide committee working for the project announced that his group will submit its completed plan to Agriculture Department officials at 11 a. m. Saturday.

The conference has been sought since November 7, when the Haycock committee drew up a program which would provide free milk to more than 20,000 boys and girls in 41 public schools situated in low income areas.

Since then arrangements have been made, also subject to Federal approval, for participation of approximately 5000 pupils in 14 parochial schools.

The "missing letter mystery," disclosed on Tuesday, was solved yesterday when Haycock, who is first assistant superintendent of schools, said that while it was received at school headquarters on Saturday, it was mislaid and came to light only yesterday.

O. M. Reed, chief of the Surplus Marketing Administration dairy division, which administers relief milk programs, wrote the letter last week to School Superintendent Frank W. Ballou, inviting him or Haycock to fix a time for conference, at which the proposed penny milk plan might be examined.

Half-pint bottles of milk, for which the municipality, or the pupils, pays only one cent, with the Federal Government bearing the difference in cost, are now being served to needy children in New York City and Boston, Lowell and Lawrence, Mass. The program is gradually being extended to other cities.

Benefits of this plan, which is to the advantage of the farmer and distributor as well as the malnourished child, were described yesterday in an Atlanta address by Roy F. Hendrickson, administrator of Surplus Marketing Administration:

"Distribution programs such as free school lunches, the stamp plan and low cost milk for children are a partial answer to our modern paradox of want in the midst of plenty," he asserted. "Such programs provide farmers with a wider market that helps to bring a fair return on their full production.

"At the same time, they get more food to people who simply cannot afford to buy an adequate diet."

The Federal milk and surplus commodity distribution programs will be of great importance when the emergency is over, said Hendrickson, by helping farmers readjust production—"a job that may be painful in the extreme."

'Lost in Hell'

5 Men, 300 Cattle Perish As Train Stalls in Tunnel

By the Associated Press

Van Nuys, Calif., Nov. 19.—Trapped in a 7000-foot railroad tunnel, five men perished today as a giant Southern Pacific locomotive burst into flames and turned the bore into a hell of smoke and fumes.

Five other men escaped, groping their way through the darkness to fresh air. Four required hospitalization.

The deaths resulted from a freak accident in which a coupling snapped on the 98-car freight train, automatically setting the air brake. The oil line from locomotive to tender was severed and burning oil sprayed the tunnel.

"It was the crazy feeling of being lost in hell," said one of the survivors, Student Fireman Boyd Bonner, 24, of Bakersfield.

Terrific heat and black, oily smoke that made ordinary gas masks, ineffective, choked off one rescue attempt after another. Smoke poured from both tunnel entrances.

Although the train was stalled at 1 a. m., it was not until afternoon that a broken coupling knuckle was replaced and the long train pulled backward into the open. The 33-ton 126-foot locomotive, last unit out, still was burning fiercely.

In the engine cab, were the burned bodies of Engineer John Dunne, 46, and Fireman S. E. Snodgrass, 24, both of Los Angeles. The body of C. E. Baker, brakeman, of Pasadena, Calif., was found 500 feet from the north entrance of the tunnel.

The bodies of two men, overcome by fumes, were found in the fortieth car, a refrigerator. One, identified as that of Bruce Clark, a Santa Fe Railroad yard helper, was hanging by the fingers from one ice bunker. The other was identified as John Burcaw, Los Angeles.

About 300 head of livestock perished in ten cars immediately behind the engine.

Union Head Rejects Roosevelt Proposals As Spread of Walkout Affects 90,000 More

(Roosevelt and Lewis letters on Page 15)

By Alfred Friendly
Post Staff Writer

Bluntly defied by John L. Lewis in another appeal to end the three-day coal strike, and answered, instead, with wildfire spread of the strike of 90,000 additional miners, President Roosevelt was reported last night as favoring simple legislation empowering him to seize the struck mines and making it illegal for anyone to interrupt their operations by a strike.

The President's tentative decision to seek punitive legislation, directed specifically against leaders of the strike, was learned after a White House appeal to settle the critical stoppage was rejected by Lewis a few hours after it was issued.

Two Courses Suggested

In identical letters to the United Mine Workers' president and to executives of three steel companies, Mr. Roosevelt suggested a settlement on either of two courses.

The first alternative was to allow the sole issue of the dispute—the grant of a union shop in the "captive" mines—to remain in status quo for the duration of the national emergency.

The second was to submit the question to arbitration, with a promise from the participants to abide by the resulting decision.

As additional assurance to the miners, the President said he was also asking all operators of mines where the union shop now prevails not to abrogate the contracts, and was requesting captive mine owners to reaffirm that they are not opposed to union organization and that they would not discourage or block any employe who wishes to join the union.

Both Suggestions Rejected

Lewis, however, rejected the first proposal—to hold in abeyance his union shop demand in the steel company mines during the emergency—on the grounds that he and his officers were under expressed instructions from the union's most recent constitutional convention to secure the union shop in captive mines.

"Representatives of the U. M. W. cannot lightly undertake to disregard such express instructions" unanimously approved by 2500 union

Armed U. S. Ships to Sail Within 10 Days

War Supplies to Go to Murmansk, Archangel And British Isles

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

Secretary Knox said yesterday that armed American merchant ships will be sailing the high seas within a week or ten days.

While declining to discuss ship movements, the Navy chief indicated that a transatlantic service will be started immediately and that the freighters will carry war supplies through combat zones into the ports of Murmansk and Archangel, Russia, as well as those in the British Isles.

16 Ships in Yards Now

Sixteen American freighters, the Secretary said, are now in shipyards having guns installed. They are vessels built in the last few years, and have gun emplacements already installed, it was indicated, enabling the work to be completed quickly.

Older vessels must have their decks strengthened and will take longer. The whole job will take three to four months, Knox stated.

A shortage of short-range anti-aircraft guns will limit progress for a time, he said, but production of the weapons is improving and they will be available in a short time.

Charge Letters Inaccurate

The Navy chief declared that letters from sailors on the Atlantic patrol saying their ships had sunk submarines were inaccurate.

He recalled that when his battalion was quartered in Brittany, France, during the World War, Army censors had shown him letters from soldiers to the folks back home, telling "lurid details of the battles they had been in," although they had never been within 200 miles of the front.

"You can take that story and apply it to the present and see how accurate these letters are," Knox added.

G. O. P. Group Asks 'Proper' Bill on Labor

Administration Urged To Offer Measure For Swift Passage

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

The House Republican leadership last night challenged the Administration to present "proper" defense labor legislation to Congress and predicted prompt approval by the House.

"Legislation to keep the defense work going will in my judgment be passed overwhelmingly by the House as soon as it is permitted by the Administration to come to the floor," House Minority Leader Joseph W. Martin, jr., said in a statement to The Post.

Contrary to reports that House Republicans might thwart any legislative effort to meet strike stoppages in the defense program, Martin predicted a majority of House Republicans will be recorded for any "properly drawn measure."

Martin's statement came as the House Labor Committee proceeded with plans for a composite draft of defense labor controls cautiously selected from a wide range of bills already introduced. At his request, Representative Smith (Democrat), of Virginia, author of the most sweeping measure, was invited to explain his bill to the committee on Monday.

The Administration manifestly was holding back specific sugges-

Things Still Rosy For Little Bette In Her Incubator

Matters were still looking rather rosy yesterday for 12-day-old Bette Gay Bonbrest, the "wonder baby" now carrying on life in an incubator at George Washington Hospital.

Bette Gay, who weighed 26¼ ounces at birth, is looking pretty rosy herself. This is definitely not due to blushing, although none of the attendants at the hospital would be quoted on that item.

They said privately that prolonged red faces are really the fashion with premature babies.

Defense Can't Stop Unions, C.I.O. Told

Fists Fly At Turubulent CIO Meeting

By A. H. Raskin.

Copyright by New York Times

Detroit, Mich., Nov. 19.—Booed on the floor of the C. I. O. convention for their undisguised hostility to Philip Murray, supporters of John L. Lewis retaliated with their fists here today, beating three pro-Murray delegates and creating what the president of the Detroit C. I. O. council denounced as a "reign of terror" in the convention headquarters at the Hotel Statler.

Detectives and deputy sheriffs patrolled the hotel lobby tonight as the anti-Lewis forces met to decide what steps they should take to avenge the beaten men.

"Vultures, Liars"

With the atmosphere of the convention hall made electric by the breach between Murray and the man he succeeded as C. I. O. president a year ago, the delegates cheered an assertion by Murray that those who suggested he was actuated by personal ambitions were "vultures," and "filthy liars." The Lewis-controlled delegations from the United Mine Workers, of which Murray has been an officer for 30 years, and the United Construction Workers abstained from participation in the wild ovation for the C. I. O. chieftain.

The principal factor in the outbreak of violence during the day was anger on the part of the Lewis forces, led by A. D. Lewis, brother of the former C. I. O. head, against their inability to obtain the approval of the Resolutions Committee for a resolution calling for the removal of Lewis' arch-enemy, Sidney Hillman, from his post as associate director of the Office of Production Management.

Underlying Resentment

Underlying this anger was resentment against the overwhelming rebuff administered to the Lewis group yesterday when the convention gave its backing to President Roosevelt's foreign policy and a growing belief among the miners that the C. I. O. was not wholehearted in its professions of support for the captive mines strike.

The demand for condemnation of Hillman grew out of his rejection of a bid submitted by the Currier Lumber Co. for construction of a Wayne County defense housing project on the ground that the company's employment of C. I. O. labor might provoke a general strike of A. F. of L. building workers in the Detroit area. The Currier employes are members of the United Construction Workers, headed by A. D. Lewis.

Murray Cheered; Organizers to Push Drive in the South

By the Associated Press

Detroit, Nov. 19.—The annual convention of the Congress of Industrial Organizations heard today from its president, Philip Murray, the declaration that "nothing must stop the work of organizing the unorganized in America—not even a great national emergency."

Murray coupled with this declaration a slogan for the C. I. O. for the coming year—organize the South, the great South."

The convention—which yesterday had received a message from President Roosevelt calling for cooperation in the production of armaments "without delay and without interruption"—cheered Murray's declaration and backed the stand of C. I. O. representatives who resigned from the National Defense Mediation Board in the current captive mines dispute.

Report Approved

Convention delegates approved a committee report which set forth:

"The decision of the board, in turning down the perfectly reasonable and logical request of the United Mine Workers of America and in establishing a Governmental policy of open shop, has made it impossible for labor representatives who keep the interests of labor at heart to continue as members or alternates of the board. We therefore commend and indorse the action of President Philip Murray, of U. M. W. A. Secretary Treasury Thomas Kennedy and their associates from the C. I. O. in resigning from the National Defense Mediation Board."

The board recommended against a union shop in captive mines in the period which preceded the current strike.

The report urged the Government to adopt the C. I. O.'s industry council plan as a means of stabilizing labor relations. This plan envisages councils in basic defense industries made up of representatives of management, labor and Government who would plan production, allocate raw materials and contracts and adjust the supply of workers to meet current and contemplated needs.

The delegates also voted its approval of another section of the report which outlined the organization of "the cruelly exploited workers of the South" as a major task of the C. I. O.

Reelection of Murray Expected

Murray declared that the last year had seen material betterment of living standards among Southern workers and wage increases which he said amounted to from 15 cents to 35 cents an hour.

When Murray, regarded by most delegates as a cinch for another term as president, finished his remarks, he received a standing ovation.

However, some of the delegates of the United Mine Workers—John L. Lewis' union—as well as most of the delegates of the United Construction Workers' Organizing committee, including Lewis' brother, A. D. Lewis, remained seated.

There were several cries of "stand up." They went unheeded by the sitting delegates.

Many delegates then joined in the staccato chant: "We want Murray. We want Murray."

tions until termination of correspondence with John L. Lewis and adjournment of the C. I. O. convention in Detroit.

In the House, meanwhile, Representative Mitchell (Democrat), of Illinois, colored member, appealed to every colored coal miner to follow President Roosevelt instead of John L. Lewis and "to show loyalty now by standing firmly by the Government and refusing to strike."

In a Senate statement, Senator Lucas (Democrat), of Illinois, said the President has 90 per cent of the American people with him and "must keep the captive mines open even it it means sending soldiers to every mine."

With both Senate and House units seeking legislative solutions, Senator Connally (Democrat), of Texas, struck directly at the coal mine impasse through his bill empowering the President to take over. Without waiting for an Administration commitment, Connally called his five-man Judiciary subcommittee to proceed with hearings tomorrow, asking testimony from War and Navy Department witnesses.

In addition to federalization of strikebound plants of mines, the Connally bill freezes a labor relations status quo in such industries, except for wage adjustments, left to a three-man board to determine.

House advocates of legislation now were proceeding on widely different plans. Chairman Mary Norton, of the House Labor Committee, introduced her bill to implement powers of the National Mediation Board to deal with strike situations like the present.

With this as a working base, the House committee may cull ideas from half a dozen other measures, notably proposals for a majority ballot of workers before any strike could be called, embodied in the Bridges bill in the Senate and the Smith bill in the House.

Smith seeks as well the 30-day "cooling off" period, freezing of closed and open shop conditions as they stand in defense industries, prohibition of mass picketing and violence and a ban on jurisdictional and sympathetic strikes. The pro-labor majority of the Labor Committee is unwilling to go nearly that far, but Smith expressed a willingness to cooperate on selective features.

It was undetermined yesterday whether the Labor Committee bill will be brought before the House as a substitute for the Vinson "cooling" off period labor bill, already approved by the Rules Committee, or whether Mrs. Norton will seek separate action.

Representative Mitchell yesterday in his House attack on John L. Lewis said he charged in a May, 1940, House speech, following Lewis' address to the National Negro Congress, that Lewis "is the most dangerous outstanding leader in America today and it is his desire to change our form of Government." Mitchell said then that Lewis "wishes to be the American dictator."

"I now call upon the Negro miners employed in the captive mines and in other coal mines throughout the United States to stand loyally by this country and this Government in this great crisis," Mitchell yesterday told the House.

Senator Lucas, in his statement, charged "a few labor leaders" are seeking "to enhance their own selfish gains at the expense of our national defense."

"The President has been tolerant, patient and more than fair in this dispute," said Lucas. "The time has come to find out whether John L. Lewis is bigger than the American Government."

Youths Picket Lewis' Home

delegates, Lewis wrote the President.

The arbitration suggestion was likewise vetoed by Lewis on grounds that Mr. Roosevelt's own recent statements on the controversy have been so "prejudicial" to the miners' claims as to make it "uncertain" that an unbiased umpire could be found "whose decision would not reflect your interpretation."

Lewis added that the umpire could not come from labor's ranks and would therefore be a man whose position in life made him "inevitably . . . susceptible to the claims and blandishments of those financial and industrial interests welding great power and influence in the financial, industrial, social and political life of the Nation."

"Red Herring" Argument

Informed observers interpreted the President's appeal as being largely "for the record" and issued without substantial hope of its success.

Its primary purpose, they said, was to annihilate what they claimed was a "red herring" argument of Lewis. This was his insistence that the Appalachian agreement, providing a union shop in virtually all coal mines except those owned by the steel industry, would have to be modified to an open-shop basis if an open-shop contract were signed with the steel company operators. This would follow, Lewis had urged, because of the "most-favored-nation" protective wage clause in the Appalachian agreement.

In his letter yesterday, the President specifically denied that the protective wage clause would necessitate such action, even if a less favorable, open shop, contract were signed in the captive mines. But to preclude any doubt on the point, Mr. Roosevelt promised to warn every signatory to the Appalachian agreement that he would be expected to abide by it without change.

The President asked that his alternative proposals be accepted by the steel executives and Lewis as "patriotic Americans." The White House announced receipt of a telegram from Benjamin F. Fairless, president of the United States Steel Corporation, declaring that "Big Steel's" mining subsidiaries would accept either proposal.

Although Lewis announced he would submit the requests to the U. M. W. policy committee, which is not to convene again until Saturday, the tone of his reply indicated that a favorable reception was only a remote possibility.

At the day's end, the strike fronts presented this picture:

SCOPE OF THE STRIKE—With scattering exceptions, all captive mines, employing 53,000 workers, were closed down, thus shutting off fuel supply to the Nation's steel mills. In addition, the strike had spread by sympathy walkouts of 90,000 more miners to about 140 commercial mines and mines owned by steel companies where the union shop had already been granted and which were therefore not included in the original strike orders. Coal production from commercial mines was reduced by an estimated 200,000 tons a day.

Grave fear was expressed that after today's Thanksgiving mine holiday the walkouts would be many times intensified in commercial mines by miners who would simply fail to come back to work tomorrow. In West Virginia it was said all the State's 550 mines, employing 105,000 miners, would be closed in 48 hours.

STEEL OPERATIONS—Shortages of coal and threats of worse to come caused the shutdown of three blast furnaces in Birmingham, Ala.; five in Pittsburgh, and one in Chicago. All were in operation of the United States Steel Corporation.

VIOLENCE—Despite the sympathy walkouts, no disorders were reported. Ten pickets were arrestd at Gary, W. Va., where two men had been shot and wounded the previous day, but operations continued peacefully under the guard of 200 State troopers.

The legislative approach to the problem was said yesterday to be favored at the White House after suggestions that the President appeal directly to the strikers were rejected for the time being. The proposal that troops be dispatched immediately to the closed mines was also thought to have been vetoed.

It was considered almost certain that no Presidential action of any major sort would emerge for the next 48 hours, at least until after the adjournment of the Congress of Industrial Organizations convention now being held in Detroit. It is scheduled to end tomorrow.

Bill Believed Being Drafted

Justice and Labor Department officials, as well as those of the National Defense Mediation Board, were believed to be working on possible legislation. Sidney Hillman, OPM labor chief, was reported to be studying the problem but not yet countenancing legislation as the best approach.

The President was reported opposed to broader legislation, covering all labor disputes, and is believed to have requested that action be specifically directed only to the coal mines and the strike leaders involved.

Various proposals for Congressional action being drafted in Administration circles were thought to provide for injunctions against those who actively instigated continuance of the coal strike and the arrest of pickets who forcibly blocked miners from returning to work.

If title to the mines were taken by the Government, under a special law, it was explained, the pits would enjoy the status of Federal establishments, where interruptions or interferences to operations could be more readily punished than is constitutionally or legally possible in the case of strikes against private plants.

Food Must Await Clarification of French Situation

Gaston Henry-Haye, French Ambassador, said yesterday he had been informed by Undersecretary of State Sumner Welles that the French government's proposal to send food from this country to French prisoners of war in Germany could not be considered until the situation in France had been clarified.

The Ambassador recently asked in an appeal to President Roosevelt for permission to purchase 2 pounds of food per month for the 1,300,000 French war prisoners held in Germany, utilizing funds of the French government frozen in this country.

De Gaulle Recognition Sought

Representative Stearns (Republican), of New Hampshire, announced yesterday he was preparing a resolution to grant United States recognition to the Free French government of Gen. Charles de Gaulle. Stearns said his resolution would be introduced in the House this week, probably Friday.

President Puts Up Carmody for Maritime Board

President Roosevelt yesterday nominated John M. Carmody, who has been serving as Federal Works Adminstrator, to be a member of the Martime Commission.

The Post revealed on October 21 that Carmody would leave the FWA and that his likely choice among other positions open to him was the Maritime Commission post.

Carmody was nominated for the unexpired term of John J. Dempsey, now Undersecretary of Interior. The term runs to September, 1946.

Congres has authorized appointment of an Army officer as Works Administrator, and Brig. Gen. Philip Fleming, now the Wage-Hour Administrator, is understood to be the probable nominee.

House Rules Group To Weigh Price Bills

Coed's Cake Gets Results

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

Baruch Measure Will Be Considered At Unusual Session

By Robert De Vore
Post Staff Writer

The House Rules Committee last night was disposed to report a rule on the price bill which would permit House consideration of legislation embodying salient features of the Baruch inflation-control plan as a substitute measure.

Leading committeemen expected at the same time that the House would begin Tuesday to tackle the problem of applying legislative checks to rising prices. Predictions on this score, however, were subject to last minute revision as leaders sought more time in which to meet Administration objections to the Banking Committee's price bill and as members clamored for anti-strike legislation on a priority status.

The Rules Committee yesterday heard from Bernard M. Baruch, chairman of the World War Industries Board, in a letter calling upon Congress to take immediate steps to hold off inflation by applying controls all along the line in the Nation's economy.

Style Restriction Urged

The letter carried the suggestion that one way to check prices would be to eliminate the present wide variety of styles and colors in men's and women's clothing and to substitute for them a few styles, in limited colors to produce "standardized, servicable, good looking" apparel "at prices lower than prevail now."

Baruch wrote Representative Gore (Democrat), of Tennessee, that he "strongly" favors his bill to restrict prices, wages, rents and defense profits as opposed to the Banking Committee's bill calling for selective price ceilings with no wage restraints.

A few minutes after Gore read the letter to the committee, the group, which rarely calls in outside witnesses, voted to request Baruch to testify at 10:30 a. m. tomorrow.

Asks Realistic Approach

"Mounting prices for the necessities of life make action by your committee imperative," Baruch declared. He added:

"But price control is only one part of inflation control. It must be accompanied by taxation, profit and money control and an over-all industrial mobilization which endeavors to increase productivity; find substitutes; allocate short supplies; utilize small business and standardize and simplify production."

Branch warned Congress to be "realistic, not political." To attempt to fix price levels without consideration of the wage element, he declared, would be "abortive." He declared that "too much latitude toward the schedule of farm prices would distort the picture."

Gore's request for a rule broad enough to permit House consideration of his bill as a substitute for the committee measure, was countered immediately by Representative Seagall (Democrat), of Alabama, Banking Committee chairman, and Representative Williams (Democrat), of Missouri, ranking member.

In a conference with Majority Leader McCormack, it was learned, they argued that Gore has no more right to have his bill considered as a substitute than have other members with counter legislative proposals.

By getting your car in shape for cold weather now you may not only avoid heavy repair costs later—but you will be safe from fines imposed by D. C. traffic regulations for car neglect. Remember, brakes that slip or catch — poor lights — and other car defects, are no excuse for traffic accidents. The eight fines imposed by D. C. Commissioners for car defects can cost you a total of $68.00 if you are challenged by an officer—they are all correctable for only $5.00 by Call Carl, Washington's "Little Detroit." Plant Officials Quit at Request Of War Dept.

By the Associated Press

Bendix, N. J., Nov. 19.—F. Leroy Hill announced today he and Harold I. Crow had resigned as president and vice president, respectively, of Air Associates, Inc., to fulfill a War Department prerequisite for return of the seized plant to private control.

In a statement, Hill declared, "In order to comply with the demand of the War Department, the board of directors of Air Associates, Inc., have insisted that Mr. Crow and myself resign our official company positions."

Hill's announcement made no mention of Walter Chalaire, attorney for the corporation, whose elimination was also demanded by the War Department, according to a company spokesman.

The Army seized the plant here October 31, after a succession of C. I. O. strikes had hampered production of 50 million dollars in aviation parts and equipment. The strikers had attacked Hill's labor policies.

Bringing the Government's stand into the open, Representative Thomas (Republican), of New Jersey, protested yesterday to Robert P. Patterson, Undersecretary of War, that the ouster request was an act of coercion.

Later Thomas said he had sent a telegram to President Roosevelt which said that in view of the "War Department's action dictating that present officers of Air Associates" be replaced, he should take the same action in the case of John L. Lewis.

"If you can replace control in case of Air Associates, you certainly can replace control in case of United Mine Workers," Thomas said.

C. I. O. Loses Test

Quincy, Mass., Nov. 19 (AP).—The C. I. O. lost a major test of strength at the Fore River shipyard today when workers of Bethlehem Steel Co., biggest plant, which holds 600 million dollars in defense contracts, voted 8991 to 3564 against having the C. I. O. represent them for collective bargaining.

It was the first defeat suffered in the Bethlehem chain by C. I. O., which has either won elections or has majority representation in ten other of the company's yards on the East Coast.

Previously workers at the Bath Iron Works, Bath, Me., and at the Electric Boat Co., of Groton, Conn., had declared themselves against the C. I. O. in elections.

Hull Is Winner Of Hebrew Medal For Service to U. S.

Secretary of State Cordell Hull yesterday was announced winner of the 1941 American Hebrew Medal Award for his services to this country "in a time of grave national crisis" and particularly for his contribution toward "better understanding between Christians and Jews."

The announcement was made by Joseph H. Biben, editor of The American Hebrew, New York City. The citation said:

"Because in his Lincolnesque manner he has repeatedly warned the country against the dangers of Naziism from within and from without; because with true greatness and simplicity he has set forth the national policy and has given of himself, the best in him, in the interests of better understanding and human freedom."

'Pennsy' Shopmen Take Wage Hike, but Others Spurn Offer

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, Nov. 19.—An agreement providing a minimum wage increase of nine cents an hour and vacation allowances for 45,000 shop men in the Pennsylvania Railroad system was signed today by representatives of the Brotherhood of Railroad Shop Crafts of America and the railroad.

The agreement was based on recommendations made by President Roosevelt's fact finding board in the railway wage dispute.

Some other groups of rail employes, including the operating Brotherhoods of the Pennsylvania System, have declined to accept the board's recommendations.

Shop employes constitute more than a fourth of the Pennsylvania's employes, totaling approximately 144,000. In the operating brotherhoods, which have called a strike for December 7 on 51 lines, are 35,000 Pennsylvania employes.

It was explained by both brotherhood and company spokesmen that the shop employe agreement here does not affect in any way negotiations involving other groups of the road's employes.

Labor Accepts Offer Of President to Confer

Representatives of the railroads and of railway labor acceded yesterday to a suggestion by President Roosevelt that they confer here tomorrow in another effort to avert a threatened strike on the rail lines.

The President made that proposal at his second conference of the day with railway executives, union officials and interested representatives of the Government.

George Harrison, president of the Brotherhood of Railway Clerks, said there had been no definite propositions or suggestions made beyond the one that negotiations continue Friday.

When Harrison was told that an agreement had by signed by representatives of the Brotherhood of Railroad Shop Crafts and the Pennsylvania Railroad for acceptance of the recommendations of the President's fact-finding board in the railway wage dispute, he grinned and remarked, "that was an independent company union."

Senate Unit Cool Toward U. S.-British Treaty Waiving Taxes on Defense Equipment

By the Associated Press

The Senate Foreign Relations Committee gave what Chairman Connally (Democrat), Texas, described as a "not very favorable" reception yesterday to a reciprocal treaty with Great Britain waiving taxes on defense supplies produced in this country under British cost-plus contracts.

Making public the treaty, signed here October 17 by representatives of the American and British governments, Connally said he personally would have to be greatly persuaded" before he would approve the principle of waiving taxes on British-owned equipment in this country in return for similar waivers of British taxes on American-owned property in Britain.

Agreeing that the general attitude of the committee was critical, Senator Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan, said John L. Sullivan, Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, had testified in a closed session that one portion of the agreement would eliminate all Federal and local taxes on contracts made by the British in this country on a cost-plus basis.

Vandenberg quoted Sullivan as saying that the Treasury would have no objection to elimination of this section. The Michigan Senator said the State Department had been asked to report how Canada, excluded from the provisions of the present agreement, handles a similar problem.

Vandenberg who previously had protested the secrecy surrounding consideration of the agreement, said its publication disclosed the fact that it involved "many serious and fundamental rights of local taxation."

Senator Shipstead (Republican), of Minnesota, another committee member, said it was possible that instances might arise under the terms of the treaty by which a large manufacturing plant which previously had been almost the entire source of tax revenues for a county, might be exempted from all taxes.

In a letter accompanying the treaty, Secretary of State Hull explained that while some States had granted certain exemptions "other States would find it difficult to do so under their laws, in the absence of a formal treaty or convention." He said, however, that assessments levied against real property for local improvements or services would be exempted from the provisions of the agreement.

German Woman Loses Plea for U. S. Citizenship

Justice Daniel W. O'Donoghue yesterday denied United States citizenship to a German-born widow claiming the right by virtue of her father's naturalization in 1867.

Mrs. Grace Hamm Wolfes, now living in Germany, brought action in District Court against Secretary of State Cordell Hull, seeking to compel him to recognize her citizenship.

She based her claim on the assertion that her father was a naturalized citizen who spent 20 years in the United States.

Th justice ruled, however, that her father was not an American citizen, having lost his status when he returned to Germany in 1870 and passed the remaining 11 years of his life there.

one might be held on minor points. It is believed, however, that no such meeting was held.

Senator Claude Pepper (Democrat), of Florida, who frequently mirrors Administration policy, in a forthright statement, meanwhile, said the time had come to draw a line, and if the Japanese want peace "let them stop their aggression; let them get out of China." He warned that "if war in the Pacific is the price of resisting the Japanese rampage, then war will have to come." He added that "the temper of America is not one of appeasement."

Hull's four points follow in general the policy of the Administration in the course of the Hull-Nomura talks, which lasted more than six months and led to no solution of the compelx Pacific situation. According to reliable information, Kurusu has put forward no new formula and the new talks thus far have been concerned mainly with going over the old ground and in an emphatic restatement of the American position.

The attiude of the Administration appears to be a firm one backed with a determination to make no concessions on basic points of principle. The American Government is said to feel confident of its strength in the Pacific and in the united front which has been developed with Britain, the Dutch East Indies, China and Australia, renewed evidence of which has been given in the last 24 hours by calls of the envoys of all four countries at the State Department.

The British Minister, Sir Ronald Campbell, and the Chinese Ambassador, Dr. Hu Shih, called at the Department Tuesday, while the Dutch Minister, Dr. Alexander Loudon, and the Australian Minister, Richard G. Casey, both called twice yesterday, visiting Secretary of Hull and Undersecretary Sumner Welles in turn.

There seems to be no doubt that in the event of a conflict breaking out between Japan and the United States, not noly Britain will be aligned with this country "within the hour," as British Minister Winston Churchill declared recently, but also Australia, and the Dutch East Indies. China is already at war with Japan.

Japan Warned Anew

Reports of fresh Japanese troop movements into Indo-China, which brought a new warning to Japan from the British foreign secretary, Anthony Eden, yesterday, caused officials here to look upon the Far Eastern situation as explosive and as liable to precipitate a serious situation if Japan launches any new aggression, wherever it may be directed.

In past discussions between Secretary Hull and Admiral Nomura, the Japanese have raised objections to every one of the points embodied in Hull's program. They have never been precise about their relations with the Axis, which have appeared to vary in relation to the success of Germany's war efforts: They have refused to withdraw their forces from Indo-China and from China, although there have been indications that the Japanese would be willing to reduce their forces in central China. And while subscribing in prniciple to commercial equality, they have sought to narrow the definition to be applicable only to the southwest Pacific, where Japan has felt she is not obtaining a fair share of the produces of the Dutch East Indies, while insisting on special privileges in China and Manchukuo.

Pending this, officials refused to affirm or deny the report of his resignation.

[Informed quarters in London said former Vice Premier Pierre Laval, ardent pro-German, was going to reenter the cabinet.

(The Germans long have been reported distrustful of Weygand, because of his pivotal position in the Mediterranean war theater and his ideas on how far France should go in collaborating with Germany's "new order.")

Rear Admiral Rene Platon, colonial secretary, left Vichy this morning for a tour of French Africa, particularly the base at Dakar on the Atlantic which the French have strengthened considerably for fear of a British or American attempt to seize it.

day birds presented to the President will be served. The pedigreed turkey came from a prize brood of 30 streamlined birds at the Agriculture Experimental Station near Beltsville, Md. It was presented by Dan Kay, veteran civil service employe at the station.

Meanwhile, every man in the Navy, ashore or at sea, will have a turkey dinner with all the trimmings. The Navy Department announced that every detail for the celebration has been prepared long in advance. It is estimated that the meal for the sailors will require 1,600,000 pounds of food, of which 360,000 pounds will consist of turkey.

The keynote of this year's Thanksgiving observance is contained in the President's proclamation asking "the Divine blessing on our decision and determination to protect our way of life against the forces of evil and slavery which seek in these days to encompass us."

"On the day appointed for this purpose," proclaimed the Chief Executive, "let us reflect at our homes or places of worship on the goodness of God, and let us pray for a speedy end to this strife and the establishment on earth of freedom, brotherhood and justice for enduring time."

The proclamation will be read at many services.

Today will be the last time that the Nation's Capital and certain other States will mark the holiday on the next to the last Thursday in November. Last May President Roosevelt proclaimed that starting in 1942, the United States would revert to the traditional last-Thursday of November observance.

Worshipers of all faiths—Jews, Catholics and Protestants, as well as city-wide interfaith groups—have arranged special programs for today. Many individual church and community rites are planned.

The annual Pan-American mass at historic St. Patrick's Church, Tenth and G Streets Northwest, will dominate the Catholic observance, with diplomats from many Latin-American countries and representatives of the United States Government attending at 10:30 a. m.

The Most Rev. Michael J. Curley, Archbishop of Baltimore and Washington, will pontificate, with the Most Rev. Amleto Giovanni Cicognani, Apostolic Delegate to the United States, presiding. The Rev. James Magner, of Catholic University, will preach.

For the first time in the history of the colorful Pan-American mass, two prelates from South America will attend. They are the Most Rev. Juan Subercaseaux, Archbishop of La Serena, Chile, and the Most Rev. Annibale Mena Porta, Codajutor Bishop of Santissima Assunzione, Paraguay.

At 11 a. m., National City Christian, First Congregational and Mount Vernon Place Methodist Churches will join in downtown neighborhood service at National City Christian Church, Thomas Circle. Dr. Howard Stone Anderson, First Church pastor, will speak.

During the same hour, local Jewish congregations will unite in worship at Beth-El Synagogue, 702 Jefferson Street Northwest, with Rabbi Aaron Volkman, host rabbi, delivering the main address.

Emphasizing "freedom for religion and religion for freedom," prominent religious leaders of three faiths will speak over WMAL and WRC today from 12:45 p. m. to 1:15 p. m. under the auspices of the Committee on Religious Life in the Nation's Capital.

They will be Dr. Seth R. Brooks, pastor of the Universalist National Memorial Church, Rabbi Gerstenfeld; Dr. Harry W. Burgan, pastor of Hamline Methodist Church, and Dr. Albert J. McCartney, pastor of Covenant-First Presbyterian Church, and general chairman of the Committee on Religious Life. The Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Bishop of Washington, is chairman emeritus.

Bishop Freeman will address Thanksgiving services at 11 a. m. at the Washington Cathedral. Four generations of his family are expected to attend dinner afterward in the bishop's home on the Cathedral Close.

Charity organizations of all faiths have arranged to see that no one goes hungry today. The Central Union Mission will serve a dinner to the needy at its headquarters, 613 C Street Northwest, under the supervision of Mrs. John S. Bennett.

The Gospel Mission, 214 C Street Northwest, carried food baskets to needy families yesterday, and will serve dinner to the poor today from 12 noon to 2 p. m. The Volunteers of America, with headquarters at 916 New York Avenue Northwest, have arranged to serve 2000 turkey dinners. A dinner also will be served at the Salvation Army Emergency Home, 622 Fifth Street Northwest.

Neighborhood Thanksgiving services of Protestant congregations will be centered at the following churches:

10 a. m., Wallace Memorial United Presbyterian, New Hampshire Avenue and Randolph Street Northwest; 10 a. m., Wesley Methodist, Chevy Chase; 10 a. m., Brookland Methodist, Fourteenth and Lawrence Street Northeast; 10 a. m., Rhode Island Methodist, First Street and Rhode Island Avenue Northwest.

10:30 a. m., East Washington Heights Baptist Church, Branch and Alabama Avenues Southeast; 10:30 a. m., Christ Episcopal Church, Thirty-first and O Streets Northwest; 10:30 a. m., Third Christian Church, Sixth and H Streets Southwest; 10:30 a. m., St. Andrews' Lutheran, Capitol Heights; 10:30 a. m., Takoma Episcopal Church, Piney Branch Road and Dahlia Street Northwest; 11 a. m., Universalist National Memorial Church, Sixteenth and S Streets Northwest.

The Thanksgiving services at Gunton-Temple Memorial Presbyterian Church, Sixteenth and Newton Streets, at 10:30 a. m., will mark the seventeenth anniversary of the dedication of the present edifice. St. Thomas' Episcopal Church, near Dupont Circle, where President Roosevelt frequently worships, will have the Rev. John Krumm as guest preacher today at 11 a. m.

St. Augustine Commandery, No. 8, Knights of St. John, will hold its annual Thanksgiving dance and reception at the Lincoln Colonnade, 1215 U Street Northwest.

750,000 British Troops Smash 50 Miles Into Libya in Big Offensive by Land, Sea and Air to them at zero hour before the operations began.

The whole great attack is under a joint army, navy and air force command, headed by Lieut. Gen. Sir Alan Gordon Cunningham for the army; his brother, Admiral Sir Andrew Browne Cunningham, for the navy, and Air Vice Marshal Arthur Coningham for the R. A. F.

The first land thrust by an army built to great strength in comparison with the "token forces" which first defeated the Italians in Libya last winter was from Sidi Omar straight into Cyrenaica, Libya's eastern section.

[A United Press dispatch said the British struck out of a sandstorm, which blotted out all view of the onrushing British tanks, even the flashes of their gunfire. Then a cloudburst, a rarity in this section of the desert, sent great torrents of water across the sands. The water was knee deep in places. An Axis panzer column was caught in the middle of one torrent and was floundering helplessly when British scouting planes spotted it. A fleet of Maryland bombers was summoned and blasted the column unmercifully, inflicting great damage.]

The thunder of bombs from American-made planes, the rattle of gunfire and the clank and roar of American-made tanks never ceased.

For the first time in this war, the best of British fighting forces were pitted in all the elements against an elite German army force which the Nazis and Fascists have built up painfully over the last few months despite constant harassment by the Royal Navy in the Mediterranean.

The Germans are known to have at least two divisions (up to 30,000 men) of armored troops between Tobruk and Bardia, and the Italians had at least one division south of Tobruk.

The 50-mile penetration officially claimed apparently occurred just south of Sidi Omar, 50 miles south of Halfaya. Halfaya is near Salum on the coast and the British lines stretched from there directly southward to Jarabub, 140 miles away, or roughly paralleling the Egyptian-Libyan border.

Don't you believe it

Rochester-tailored Overcoats are NOT always expensive!

That's the way it used to be. But no more—if you know your way around! Not so far back, MR. BIG was the only citizen who could afford that luxury—a Rochester-tailored overcoat. He selected it in red plush surroundings, payed plenty, and wore it with a proud swelling of the chest. And rightfully so. A Rochester-created overcoat was—and still is—the masterpiece of tailoring art. Well, this year you and you and I are going to join Mr. Big in the enjoyment of Rochester's suave style and skillful needlework. And we're going to do it at Bond's—without fancy prices! You see, Bond is the only retail clothier in America with a plant in Rochester. The Bond store near you is part of that plant. Every business man knows such a streamlined system cuts costs. So why go overboard, for a taste of Rochester's famous quality? Go to Bond's, instead!

Stimson, Knox Stirred Over Parran Book

By Gerald G. Gross

Post Staff Writer

A departmental, if not a Congressional, investigation of the book, "Plain Words About Venereal Disease," appeared probable yesterday.

The Post learned that Paul V. McNutt, Federal Security Administrator, has been called upon to "explain" personally to War Secretary Henry L. Stimson and Navy Secretary Frank Knox, criticism leveled against the services—particularly the Army—by the volume's coauthors. They are Surgeon General Thomas Parran, of the United States Public Health Service and Assistant Surgeon General R. A. Vonderlehr.

The United States Public Health Service is a Federal Security Agency bureau.

McNutt Issues Statement

"'Plain Words About Venereal Disease' is a private publication of Dr. Parran and Dr. Vonderlehr," McNutt asserted yesterday. "Books have been published privately before by Dr. Parran and other officials. There is nothing new or unusual in the fact that it was written and published privately.

"Inasmuch as it was so published, it did not come before the Federal Security Administrator for consideration. Like any book, it must depend—as the reputations of authors always depend—for its popular and official reception upon the facts it contains and the validity of its contentions.

"The facts will be checked."

Charging that syphilis and gonorrhea rates have risen alarmingly in the Army since conscription began, Plain Words storms against the War Department for its failure to invoke the May Act.

This law makes it a Federal offense to solicit prostitution or operate disorderly houses, or even rent buildings or trailers which are used for those purposes, within such areas in the vicinity of military and naval camps or stations as the Secretaries of War and Navy shall designate.

Permits Modified Martial Law

It permits the declaration of a modified form of martial law in those sections of towns and cities where vice conditions are so bad as to endanger the "efficiency, health and welfare" of men in uniform.

Although prostitution is responsible for 75 per cent of all venereal infections and vice is flourishing in many places convenient to camps, the Secretaries of War and Navy have not designated any areas for enforcement of the May Act, say Drs. Parran and Vonderlehr.

That the authors were ignorant of a request made by the Federal Security Agency to the War Department to refrain from invoking the new statute except as "a last resort" appeared probable yesterday.

Enunciation of this policy was by the FSA social protection division. Drs. Parran and Vonderlehr did not know of its existence when they placed full blame upon the War Department, The Post ascertained.

"It is the policy of this division," says the statement, made public for the first time, "to work through State and local authorities. It is the hope of those responsible for administration of this program that repression of commercialized prostitution will continue as a permanent policy throughout this Nation after this emergency is over.

Urges Repression

"This can be accomplished only when State and local authorities and local communities are convinced that repression, rather than toleration, is the answer to the problem."

Federal Security Agency is involved in the situation because that branch of the Government, as well as the Army and Navy, is directed by the May Act to assist in repressing prostitution and accept cooperation of State and local authorities in stamping out vice inimical to the Nation's soldiery.

Rejection Rate For White District Selects Increases

In October, the rejection rate for white Washington registrants at the Richmond induction station rose to a higher level than in the preceding three months, it was announced yesterday by Lieut. Col. A. C. Gray, local selective service medical officer.

Of 412 white selectees, 36 were rejected, which made a rate of 8.7 per cent, in contrast with the previous three months when the rate was less than 7 per cent. Col. Gray said the figure was "reasonably satisfactory."

The three leading causes for rejection were psycho-neurose, 11; visual defects, 5, and heart disease, 5. Others listed were: Dental defects, 1; ear defects, 2; varicose veins, 1; musculo-skeletal, 1; hypertension, 1; lungs, 4; chronic alchoholism, 1; over or under weight, 1 gonorrhea, 2; syphilis, 1.

No Negro registrants were sent to the Baltimore induction station in October, it was said.

19 Quit Diet's Imperial Order In Protest Against Gag Rule

By the United Press

Tokyo (Thursday), Nov. 20.—Nineteen diet members of the Imperial Rule Assistance League resigned from that organization today in protest against its refusal to allow discussion of internal policies in parliament.

They acted after the league, which was formed last year to serve as a totalitarian political party, forced the resignation from the House of Representatives of Taneo Miyazawa after he had criticized living standards and taxation.

Miyazawa, who spoke yesterday, was assailed by his colleagues because they considered his criticisms inappropriate when Japan is attempting to demonstrate national unity.

(Apparently a press ban in Tokyo prevented transmission of reports on Miyazawa's actual words.)

When Emperor Hirohito opened the special five-day diet session on Sunday, he commanded harmonious consideration of all government bills. This, in the opinion of the imperial rule assistance league, meant a command to the diet to give unanimous acceptance of all bills without criticism.

A conference of members decided to have the league's disciplinary committee invite Miyazawa to resign because his remarks were "really deplorable" and "contrary to the mission of the special diet session." Miyazawa quickly withdrew the objectionable statements and submitted his resignation, which the house at once accepted.

The diet completed the bulk of its business last night and will adjourn today in an atmosphere considerably more optimistic with regard to American-Japanese relations than when the session opened.

Though nothing has been revealed here about the fresh instructions which Saburo Kurusu, special envoy to Washington, reportedly requested after his long talk with Secretary of State Hull on Tuesday, it is understood that Japan is willing to allow a month for Kurusu to negotiate an agreement.

Some quarters here understood Japan is willing to agree to almost complete withdrawal of its military forces from China, and then to have a peace agreement reached between Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek and Wang Ching-Wei, head of the Japanese-protected regime in Nanking.

Another report heard here is that Japan is not unwilling to withdraw from its alliance with Germany and Italy. In order to save face, it would not do so by public declaration, but by some secret formula.

Reds Shatter 4 Nazi Divisions Snared on Don

By the Associated Press

London, Nov. 19.—The destruction of four divisions of Field Marshal Ewald von Kleist's German army in a flaming trap on the Don, barrier to the North Caucasus, and the recapture of important heights in the Crimea were announced tonight in Soviet military dispatches.

The Russians acknowledged, however, that Soviet troops in the area about Kerch were "gradually retreating."

These broadcast reports said the Von Kleist offensive above Rostov had been brought to a dead stop as the result of the entrapment, in which thousands of men died and much armored equipment was destroyed or captured by the Russians.

Red Dive-Bombers Active

Red dive bombers, which the Russians call "Stormoviks," supported the counter-attack in the Crimea, presumably near Sevastopol, the besieged naval base in the west of the peninsula. The Germans, it was stated, abandoned their positions and formed a line farther back.

The Von Kleist action was believed to be part of a general new assault on Rostov, spearhead by tank forces under the Panzer expert, Col. Gen. Heinz Guderian.

On an arc reaching down to the Sea of Azov the Germans were reported losing heavily, but pressing the attack with determination in some sectors. Local counter-attacks it was said, resulted in gains from 4 to 12 miles for the Russians and the recapture of a number of villages.

Holding a 6-to-1 superiority in tanks over the Russians, Von Kleist's force pierced first and second Red army defense lines, but Russian infantrymen, hidden in rearward dugouts, held their ground.

Big Soviet guns opened up with a withering fire and many of the German tanks plunged into pits and were torn apart by mines. Then Soviet planes rushed in to strafe the Germans, and the Russian lines re-formed in a pocket.

Time after time the Nazi panzers wheeled back and forth and charged, but the lines held.

More than half the Nazi tanks were put out of action, said a Tass agency dispatch, and the dead were being counted in the thousands tonight. The Russians said they captured 273 trucks, 13 tanks and many guns.

Before Volokolamsk, some 65 miles northwest of Moscow, on the central front, the Germans were reported to have achieved some headway in a new attack, supported by a large number of tanks.

Yet another German assault was reported from the Tula sector of the Moscow front, 10 miles below the Red capital, where a violent intermittent conflict has surged indecisively for many days. Tonight the Moscow radio said the drive was repulsed.

100,000 Dead In Terror, London Says

By the Associated Press

London (Thursday), Nov. 20.—The "hostage terror" sweeping nine Axis-occupied countries in Europe has resulted in the death of more than 100,000 persons, and the disappearance and imprisonment of countless other thousands, the inter-allied information committee announced today.

Britain, Russia, and the nine occupied countries are represented on the committee, whose report said:

"No occupied country is free of the hostage terror. In seven out of the nine countries thousands of innocent men and women have died, and in all of them thousands live daily under the shadow of death."

The 4500-word formal report said the hostage system was invented by the Italians in their invasion of Albania in 1939, was perfected by the Germans and "received its most ruthless application" in Bulgarian reprisals on six Greek cities where 15,000 persons were killed in a single expedition.

Nazi Escape Fails

Kingston, Ontario, Nov. 19 (AP).—Employes of a music store were mystified today when a piano brought from the Fort Henry internment camp began to squeak and move.

Police plucked from the cabinet, 50 inches long, 10 inches wide and 22 inches high, Lieut. Hans Strehl of the Nazi air force, who had hidden himself in the piano an hour before.

Later a search disclosed another German prisoner, Second Lieut. Siegfried Schmidt, hiding inside another piano which had not yet been removed from the fort.

Some More Ersatz

London, Nov. 19 (AP).—An official of the ministry of economic warfare said today that Germany was so short of wool that German sailors have been discovered wearing pants of artificial silk, paper and fur. German soldiers have been reported wearing women's fur coats on the Russian front, he said.

Shifts on British Radio

London, Nov. 19 (AP).—The British Broadcasting Corporation staff has undergone "a number of changes in organization" as a result of greetings broadcast to King Vittorio Emanuele of Italy on his seventy-second birthday, November 11, an authoritative source sai dtoday.

Pressure Put On Long Front, Germans Say

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, Nov. 19.—The German armies of the east were reported on the move again tonight along a battle line running from just below Lake Ladoga down to the Black Sea, their offensives coinciding with an improvement in the weather all over the vast front.

This new phase was described in the communique simply as "new and successful operations." The high command was in one of its silent moods and declined to indicate the directions or objectives of its new thrusts.

Authorized military dispatches gave brief glimpses of action.

These included the strategic railway junction of Tikhvin, 120 miles east of Leningrad and about 50 miles below Ladoga; Kalinin, on the northwestern Moscow front; other areas of the central theater, and the Donets Basin.

Hungarian dispatches likewise reported heavy action in the region of Rostov, the Don River city at the northern entrance to the Caucasus.

From the Donets Valley, one dispatch declared, a Russian assault had been checked in a bloody engagement in which the Red troops had "charged over masses of their own dead."

Of the central, or Moscow, sector, tank battles successful for the Germans were reported.

Overnight bombing raids on both Moscow and Leningrad were reported.

U. S., Mexico Agree To Settle Disputes

garded by the two governments as "unappealable."

If the experts fail to reach an agreement, each will submit a report to his own government and the two governments will then attempt through diplomatic negotiations to determine fair compensation for the oil properties. If these negotiations are not successful within five months, the oil section of yesterday's agreement will be voided and the Mexican government's nine million dollar deposit will be returned.

State Department officials said yesterday the interested oil companies had been informed in advance of the new formula, but had not agreed to it.

Secretary Hull, however, described the arrangements for settlement of the oil dispute as "practical, efficient and equitable," and said the information to be obtained by the experts "obviously is essential in connection with any settlement."

"The American interests involved," he added, "will retain full liberty of action in determining the course they will pursue before, during and after the valuation proceedings."

Hull, contrasting the months of negotiation and eventual settlement of a number of vexatious points in Mexican-American relations with efforts on other continents to settle similar disputes by force, declared in his statement:

"These agreements constitute a further concrete proof of the fact that problems existing between nations are capable of mutually satisfactory settlement when approached in a spirit of good will, tolerance and a desire to understand each other's points of view."

Hull pointed out that the "general claims" of American citizens against Mexico "have defied solution for generations."

Under the agreement these and various agrarian claims against the Mexican government will be settled in full by the Mexican payment of 40 million dollars. Of this sum, 3 million dollars has already been paid, another 3 million dollars will be paid shortly and the remainder will be liquidated by annual payments of $2,500,000, beginning next year.

Under terms of the exchange rate agreement the United States will provided a 40-million-dollar stabilization agreement to hold the peso at its present rate of 4.85 to the dollar.

The 30-million-dollar Export-Import Bank credit for completion of Mexico's section of the Inter-American Highway and other road construction will be made available in three annual installments.

At the same time the Export-Import Bank also is pledged "to consider sympathetically" other requests for credit for other projects in Mexico, whether undertaken by the Mexican government or private agencies guaranteed by that government.

The silver agreement provides that the United States Treasury will make direct purchases from the Mexican Treasury up to 6,000,000 ounces a month.

To Facilitate Marketing

This provision will restore American purchasing of American silver to the same basis on which it was conducted prior to 1938. Since 1938 Mexico has been forced to market its silver through the New York silver market, as a reprisal for the foreign oil property seizures at that time. The new agreement is expected to facilitate the marketing of Mexican silver here but not substantially increase the amount sold.

The silver agreement was signed by Secretary Morgenthau and Eduardo Suarez, Mexican Secretary of the Treasury of Mexico, at the Treasury here early in the afternoon. Suarez then went to the State Department to sign the other agreement.

Harassed Blue Army Edges Deeper Into Red Territory

By Marshall Andrews

A Staff Correspondent

With First Army in the Field, Nov. 19.—Hammered front and flank by all the weight of the armored corps, the Blue First Army lay battered and harassed a little deeper in Red territory tonight.

Its fight against the tanks, thrown into the battle at last by Red Fourth Corps, was in large measure the fight of the Twenty-ninth Division. Waiting on the north flank last night, ready to attack southward this morning, the Twenty-ninth was pulled out of the line and flung in the path of the First Armored Division.

During a day of fighting back and forth through the City of Albemarle, N. C., the troops had distinguished spectators on the sidelines. Secretary of War Stimson and Lieut. Gen. Lesley J. McNair, chief of staff of General Headquarters, were in the town during the height of the battle.

All day today the Twenty-ninth fought tanks along the highways, in remote cotton fields, in the streets of Albemarle, through its own bivouacs. Time after time it thrust the tank attacks aside, turned them into new channels, whittled them down to ineffectiveness. The cost was tremendous.

D. C. Major "Killed"

The entire First Battalion of the District's 121st Engineers was annihilated and its commander, Maj. John T. O'Neill, of Washington, hypothetically killed.

By the time a tank attacked battalion arrived Company C had dwindled to one squad, and its commander, Capt. Henry D. Greene, of Washington, was a casualty. The tanks wiped out the tank attacker battalion and pushed southward toward Albemarle.

The Twenty-ninth Division, facing southward for an attack today, was called back and Maj. Gen. Milton A. Reckord, commanding, pulled the 115th (Maryland) Infantry out of line and rushed it into Albemarle in borrowed horse vans and sent the Eighty-eighth Brigade (Virginia) and the Twenty-ninth Antitank Battalion to defend the north maneuver boundary.

Col. D. John Markey, commanding the 115th Infantry, was cornered in an Albemarle alley by Red scout cars. Lieut. Col. Peyton G. Nevitt, of Washington, division adjutant general, was captured.

Toward the south, things were not going so well for First Army, according to meager reports which filtered slowly and piecemeal through the fog of war. It was reported that the Forty-fourth Division, in the center, was encircled by the Second Armored Division and cut off for a time, while the Twenty-eighth at its side thrust out a salient so far that it had to be hurriedly withdrawn to avert possible disaster.

Albemarle, N. C.—Brig. Gen. Albert L. Cox, commanding the Washington provisional brigade, toured the maneuver area today, visiting the Twenty-ninth Division command post. Gen. Cox, former commander of the District National Guard, stopped to see the 121st Engineers, of the District Guard and its commander, Col. John W. Oehmann. With Gen. Cox was Lieut. Col. L. J. I. Barrett, executive officer of the provisional brigade.

Brazil Is Discussed at Forum

A little of Brazil was transported to the auditorium of Roosevelt High School last night with more than 200 persons attending the third monthly meeting of the Pan American Good Neighbor Forum.

At the two previous meetings the organization, founded to better acquaint Washingtonians with Latin-American countries, focused its attention on Argentina and Chile.

"Brazil has always been a very good neighbor, long before the good neighbor policy was mentioned," Dr. Paulo Lopes Correa, sent to American University here by his government, declared in a talk.

Also on the program were records of the music of Brazil explained by Alexandre Morgados Mattos, also a student at American University. Dee G. Davis, former vice consul in the United States Foreign Service presided.

S. W. P. Secretary Sees Revolt After War

Minneapolis, Nov. 19 (AP).—Details of a social revolution to come were brought out as cross-examination of James P. Cannon, national secretary of the Socialist Workers Party, started today.

Cannon, first of the defense witnesses in the Federal court trial of 23 persons on charges of seditious conspiracy, predicted there would be "15 million to 25 million unemployed after the collapse of the defense boom" and suggested that because of large-scale unemployment and general unrest many adherents would be won to the S. W. P. program. He did not say when this condition would occur.

Harassed Blue Army Edges Deeper Into Red Territory

Thanksgiving

It is often said that one values a thing only when it is lost. That is not true of the tangible blessings which we Americans have garnered out of our America. There is no lack of appreciation of what our country has yielded in the material satisfactions of life. Day in and day out we are giving thanks. And on this particular day the thanks go to Providence officially and unitedly in all American homes. This national habit should be a sign of true humility, but sometimes it is rated abroad as a brand of national egotism. That comes of the colloquial way in which some of our people talk about their country as "God's own country." But in this troubled world peoples abroad are now apt to be the first to pay this tribute to our unique situation. Ours is, indeed, God's own country compared to theirs. Abroad hunger and desolation and strife abound; here there is enough peace and plenty to make the entire world envious. If some of our luxury wants have been curtailed by the needs of the defense program, the restrictions have done little to make our modes of living any different.

That same Providence which makes our lot so fortunate today has watched over our Nation from the beginning. Businessmen in London told the Pilgrims when they set out on the Mayflower that they would have to stand on their own legs. The Pilgrims knew differently. In their faith they felt they were not alone, and they found confirmation in that belief in the quiet sea which brought the Mayflower safely to American shores. This land proved as hospitable as the sea. Squanto, the Indian chief, came to meet them, and by a strange fate he could speak English. He it was who told the voyagers of the miracle of corn. Surely the hand of Providence was manifest to all when Governor Bradford proclaimed the day of the first thanksgiving and prayer.

Down the years the fullness of the earth has yielded such riches that today America is the wealthiest nation in the world. But this good fortune now requires to be insured as well as enjoyed and shared. Regard for our security will not allow us to look at the throat-cutting abroad, as the Swedish Baron von Nolken commended to our forefathers in the Napoleonic wars, with equanimity. It is not the security of our possessions alone that compels the new watchfulness. We are equally concerned with the conservation of the intangible as well as the tangible blessings which we enjoy in abundance. Our freedom is at stake as well as our security. It is wrapped up in the world fight for freedom. In the festival of today, therefore, the American people are joining their thanksgiving for God's bounty in all good things with a dedication to protect the opportunity that comes to all individuals in this free country to pursue the good life. It is our priceless heritage that our role in this respect will benefit freemen everywhere.

Tokyo Pipe Dream

At the present time the shortest route from Japan to the Indian Ocean involves passage through the Straits of Singapore. This strategic body of water is dominated by the British. Not surprisingly, then, the suggestion has again and again been advanced in Tokyo that a canal be built across the narrow Kra Peninsula which separates the Gulf of Siam from the Bay of Bengal.

Even before the onset of the present Pacific trouble such an idea has never met with much favor either in Bangkok or London. Nowadays it could not be entertained for a moment. For a Japanese-controlled canal across the Kra Peninsula would mean the end of the independence of Thailand. It would also alter radically the balance of power in southeastern Asia. As long as Singapore occupies the strategic position it does, a formidable barrier exists in the path of Japan's southward expansion. Were it possible for Japan to short-circuit Singapore, she would have gone a long way in the direction of establishing that hegemony over southeastern as well as eastern Asia which is the admitted object of her foreign policy.

But the whole scheme is utterly impracticable. Admission of this fact is to be found in the Japan Chronicle which, after declaring that such a canal would serve as "the Panama Canal of southeastern Asia" places its construction at that time in the future when the "East Asia Coprosperity Sphere" shall have arisen. In other words, the Kra canal continues to be a pipe dream. Japan must first catch the hare. And not only Great Britain but also the United States, China and the Netherlands Indies are determined that she must not be permitted to do so.

Mr. Lewis Defiant

The patience and forbearance which have marked the President's attitude toward the coal strike are again demonstrated in his unavailing effort to persuade John L. Lewis to entrust the issue in the coal strike to arbitration. Mr. Lewis' refusal is a farrago which puts the hallmark upon his intransigeance. His letter will be condemned in all walks of life in America. It is more than an insult to the intelligence of the American people; it is a piece of insolence toward our Chief Executive which must be without parallel in our annals.

The President had provided Mr. Lewis with a way out of an untenable position. The weakness of that position had been plain to the overwhelming majority of the American people. It seems to have been plain to Mr. Lewis in the bargain. For he and his organization have been engaged in dragging red herrings across the issue ever since the Mediation Board handed down its decision. Mr. Lewis' journal, as we reported yesterday, has been disseminating the statement that the sole issue is union recognition. Mr. Lewis himself had contended that he could not execute an open-shop agreement for the captive mines without giving up the union shop in all the other bituminous coal fields. The President in his fresh peace offer spiked both statements. There is only one issue, and Mr. Lewis still dodges it. That issue is whether the Government shall force into the U. M. W. A. 5 per cent of the mine workers employed in the captive mines, so that a union shop shall prevail throughout the entire industry. This the President feels cannot properly be done by the Government of the United States. He feels it is fundamentally undemocratic.

But even though this demand is not met there would be no loss of any privileges which the miners in the commercial mines at present enjoy under existing agreements. Indeed, the workers in the captive mines stand to gain all those privileges, with the exception of the union shop, which their fellows enjoy in the commercial mines. That assurance had been forthcoming from the coal operators.

The miners by this time should know to what lengths the President as well as the Mediation Board has gone in aiding Mr. Lewis in the complete unionization of the captive-mine industry. He has indorsed the board's suggestion to the few miners outside the union to join up. He thinks they should "share with their fellow workers the burdens as well as the benefits of the union." Moreover, he has asked the operators of the captive mines to reaffirm their assurances that they are not opposed to such unionization, and that assurance has been given. But Mr. Lewis has elected to throw overboard this final opportunity to settle the issue peacefully. The miners, after this exchange, should have no difficulty in deciding who is their leader. Their leader at this time of national emergency is the President of the United States, and they should join the public at large in closing ranks behind their President in reasserting the authority of their Government against the man who so egregiously defies it.

"Plain Words"

No man in recent years has done as much to high-light the appalling toll of venereal disease as Surgeon General Parran. In lectures, radio addresses, newspaper and magazine articles, he has labored tirelessly to dissipate public ignorance and neglect of maladies which until recently were unmentionable in mixed society. Thus the publication of his new book, Plain Words About Venereal Disease, written in collaboration with his assistant, Dr. R. A. Vonderlehr, will arouse wide attention. For it presents an entirely different picture of venereal disease in the Army from that recently disclosed by the War Department. Several days ago the department released a statement emphasizing its unremitting campaign against the twin scourges, syphilis and gonorrhea. The Army's venereal disease rate, it was claimed, is now far lower than it was during the World War. This is encouraging news—but not encouraging enough for Dr. Parran and his assistant. In no uncertain terms they indict the Army command for tolerating prostitution in and around military establishments, and they claim that as a direct result venereal disease among the selectees is constantly increasing.

These and other charges elaborated in Plain Words About Venereal Disease are serious and justify a detailed statement of the War Department's experience and position. The basic controversy—suppression versus regulation and control of prostitution—is age-old. Moreover, there is no doubt whatever that the Army has made considerable progress in the prevention of disease. But this is no time for the Army to maintain its traditional discreetness about so vital an issue. The newspapers and magazines have been full of stories about the rebirth of the prostitution racket following defense mobilization. Reliable investigators have reported the springing up of what Dr. Parran and his assistant call "panzer divisions" of prostitutes who have invaded Army camps in automobiles and trailers. Logically the spread of disease follows in spite of Army-imposed prevention measures.

Under the May Act, which was passed last July, the Secretaries of War and Navy and the Federal Security administrator are authorized to take steps to prevent prostitution in areas around military and naval establishments. The Federal Security Agency, however, has advised the War Department that "the establishment by military authorities of areas as out of bounds for men in uniform, or the invocation of the May Act, are measures to be taken only as a last resort." Apparently the Army feels that the situation is well enough in hand to justify holding the May Act in reserve. But Drs. Parran and Vonderlehr marshal an impressive array of facts and figures which certainly seem to cast doubt on the wisdom of the Army's stand—and which call for a comprehensive explanation of that stand.

Weygand Out

The elimination of Gen. Maxime Weygand as commander of the French forces in North Africa, now confirmed, destroys the last lingering justification for continued American recognition of the Vichy regime. No time should be lost in breaking off relations with a government whose subservience to the Nazis has long been apparent. The fall of Weygand must be regarded as proof positive of Vichy's readiness to turn over French North and West Africa, and possibly the French fleet as well, to the Nazis. By the same token a break with Vichy should be immediately followed by recognition of General de Gaulle and his associates as the true representatives of the people of France.

Like Marshal Petain, General Weygand guessed wrong in June, 1940, about Britain's chance of survival after the fall of France. But General Weygand has since made it clear that he is no Germanophile, no collaborationist. He has sought to maintain the vast colonial region placed under his charge as part of the French Empire and to keep it from falling into the hands of the Nazis. It was because of this attitude as much as anything else that this country has continued to maintain relations with Vichy. To be sure, there have been repeated indications of Vichy's readiness to do Hitler's bidding in many fields of action. But it was because of General Weygand's refusal to follow the course advocated by the Darlans, Lavals, Deats and Brinons that we have kept up contacts with the government to which Weygand gave his allegiance.

Hitler has at last turned the screws on Vichy and through Vichy on Weygand because things have not been going too well for the Third Reich these last months. Russia is still in the field. Great Britain with American assistance has been winning the Battle of the Atlantic. The recent modification of our Neutrality Law permits American ships to be armed and to be sent anywhere. And British sea power has now increased to the point where Winston Churchill has promised the dispatch of strong naval reinforcements to the Far East to hold Hitler's Asiatic ally in check. Now as a countermeasure to all these rebuffs the Fuehrer has found it necessary to put renewed pressure on France to become an integral part of the "new order" and, as the elimination of General Weygand shows, he has this time met with success.

The crumbling of what remained of Vichy French opposition to Hitler constitutes a development menacing to the Western Hemisphere and the anti-Nazi front. The use by the Nazis of French bases in North Africa would multiply the burdens of the British fleet in seeking to interrupt shipments of men and supplies to Libya. Germany would be placed in a position to circumpass Gibraltar and use West Africa as a base of operations against British and American shipping in the South Atlantic. This latter possibility the United States can no longer discount. It must be anticipated and prepared for with all the strength we can muster. We cannot afford to permit a hostile power to establish itself at the bridgeheads of West Africa which unite Europe and South America by air. The dismissal of General Weygand by Vichy should therefore be the signal for far-reaching action by the United States with a breaking-off in relations with the Vichy regime as the inevitable first step.

FRUIT FOR THE WARY

Yellow is the corn under the green husk.
Under the thin drift of silk
Lie the honey and the milk.
Over the peach the furry skin
Curves to hold the gift within.
The melon builds a sturdy wall
To hold the precious water back.
But the thimble-fashioned berry
Offers sweetness unafraid
In the summer sun and shade.
Succulent and red and ripe,
It tempts the trusting and the wary.
The grasping hand receives the stain
Red as are the greedy lips
Where the berry-heart has lain.

First Thanksgiving

Why do the staff writers of the Washington Post and other papers north of the Potomac River continue to spread the mistaken belief that the first Thanksgiving Day in America was observed by the Pilgrims in New England?

On page four of your rotogravure section, November 16, you say, "The first Thanksgiving was a spontaneous expression of gratitude to God by the Pilgrims."

The Pilgrims did not arrive at Plymouth until December 21, 1620. They did not observe their first Thanksgiving Day until the fall of 1621.

December 4, 1619, is the date on which the first Thanksgiving Day was observed by English-speaking peoples in America, and it was in Virginia. It was on that date that the ship Margaret arrived at the Berkeley plantation with settlers, supplies and servants. Owners of the ship had given instructions that the day of the ship's arrival must be "yearly and perpetually kept as a day of thanksgiving to Almighty God." These orders were and have been obeyed.

Several various dates have been observed in Massachusetts and Virginia as days of Thanksgiving. One peculiar difference was that the pious Puritan apparently observed the day with feasting while the fun loving Cavalier apparently observed the day with fasting and prayer.

Prior to President Lincoln's selection of the fourth Thursday in November as Thanksgiving Day there never was any permanent day, month or even year in which all of the States observed a day of thanksgiving. Until the New Deal all of the other Presidents followed the example of Mr. Lincoln.

This year 16 of the States still are of the opinion that they are preserving a sacred tradition of the Colonial forefathers by observing November 27 as Thanksgiving day. Thirty-two other States will observe November 20, at the suggestion of President Roosevelt.

In the lower northern neck of Virginia union Thanksgiving Day church services will be held this year on November 19, 20 and 27.

If the Nation observed the first Thanksgiving day in America it will always be December 4.

Prophetic Vision

Surely Alfred Lord Tennyson was endowed with prophetic vision. In his great poem "Locksley Hall" which he gave to the world exactly 100 years ago (published 1842), he writes:

For I dipt into the future, far as human eye could see,
Saw the Vision of the world, and all the wonder that would be;

Saw the heavens fill with commerce,
argosies of magic sails,
Pilots of the purple twilight, dropping down with costly bales;

Heard the heavens fill with shouting, and there rain'd a ghastly dew
From the nations' airy navies grappling in the central blue;

Far along the world-wide whisper of the south-wind rushing warm,
With the standards of the peoples plunging thro' the thunderstorm;

Till the war-drum throbbed no longer, and the battle-flags were furl'd
In the Parliament of man, the Federation of the world.

There the common sense of most shall hold a fretful realm in awe,
And the kindly earth shall slumber, lapt in universal law.

Taxi Fares

I am heartily in favor of the proposed increase in the taxicab rate, as reported in The Post, provided the change be made to work to the advantage of both the taxi men and the public.

Until a year ago I had driven my own car for 35 years, and so am familiar with the shortest routes all over the city. More recently, owing to physical disability, I have discontinued driving, and am now a frequent user of taxis—sometimes several times a day. I must say I have had some very unpleasant experiences in the matter of taxi fees.

The maps which the taxicabs carry are very difficult for the passengers to interpret, and it is an easy matter for the drivers to add an extra zone. Maps should be printed in larger type. This is especially true at this time, when the city is more than ever filled with newcomers and transients. Cabdrivers frequently berate persons who walk a block or two to save a zone; "cheapskate" is, I believe, the drivers' designation for those persons. But the drivers do not feel "cheap" when overcharging their passengers.

Another disagreeable feature of the whole question is the border-line zone. Persons living on a border line, for instance, on Florida Avenue, find it almost imposible to get a cab. The location seems to be not clearly a part of either the first zone or the second. I believe the cab companies recognize that the question of zones is a problem.

Recently I took a cab at Georgetown Hospital to go to the Catholic University. I told the driver the nearest route, but he, disregarding what I said, took me out N Street to Pennsylvania Avenue, through M Street, Fifteenth Street to Rhode Island Avenue, out Rhode He wanted to charge me for full Island Avenue to Fourth Street zones. Of course, knowing the city Northeast, and to the University, thoroughly, I did not pay him for the unnecessary part of the trip; and, consequently, had an unpleasant argument.

I would suggest that:

1. Perhaps the better element of drivers could maintain a blacklist for drivers known to be cheaters.

2. Improve maps which are carried in the cabs to make them easily decipherable.

3. Passengers take the license numbers of cheating drivers, and report them to the company.

4. Passengers ascertain from the driver the exact amount of the fee before entering the cab.

Swedish Freedom

At various times there is reiterated the charge that Sweden is a Nazi prisoner and cannot be counted on to help the democracies at all. We are even told that Sweden is a "pro-Fascist state."

On the contrary we find that Sweden is still expressing its own opinions in a democratic vein about Europe's affairs regardless of its nearness to the Nazi homeland. We find the Swedes still using the latest American films and those that show the virtues of democracy all the time. We discover that the Swedes themselves think that they are still free to express their thoughts as they like in spite of threats from Germany.

The Swedes have not introduced a single Nazi feature in their country. It is not in their character or thought processes to do so. When Swedes can be shown that they have, then they will admit that the charges "experts" place against them are true. So far the Swedes will admit nothing of the kind.

Selectees' Christmas

Before being inducted into the Army, I read much about the morale of the soldiers. Now, I am in a position to write something about it.

In our civilian lives fear and uncertainty were the chief causes of depression (morale). Whether a man is in uniform or not these truths still prevail.

Most of us selectees feared being sent too far from home, and we were. In our camp, the majority of us are between 1300-2000 miles from home. The possibility of going home to see our parents, friends, sweethearts or wives on short leaves, usually weekends, was out of the question. Anyway, the uncertainty of where we were going was over with. "Well, boys, let's be good soldiers, maybe we'll be rewarded with a furlough later on."

Then the President of the U. S. A. issues a proclamation saying all soldiers will be given an opportunity to go home on Christmas. Our spirits go soaring. But, our troop commander says this does not apply to selectees who have not finished their basic training—no furloughs! Rumors say we will probably get a few days leave but with such a long way to go, what good would a few days be? The officers won't say anything at all, now. More uncertainty! With this sort of mental torture, Mr. Civilian, what would your morale be?

We're not soft, we've worked very hard for weeks—somehow, we can't callous our hearts toward the ones we love. The meanings of Armistice Day can be questioned, but not the meaning of Christmas. No misinterpretations can ever set this sacred day aside. It's a day for love and our loved ones around us give us the deep feeling of what we are training or fighting to preserve.

Listen in on the talk in the barrack, "Aw shucks, why doesn't someone tell us something definite, one way or the other." "If we could go home for Christmas, we'd come back uplifted and we'd show them a type of morale no one could criticize." "I'm not a drinking man, but if I can't get home for Christmas, I'll get plastered. "I don't care what they do to me I'm going A. W. O. L. I'm going to see my girl before its too late." "From the newspapers I gather we're at war, who knows if we'll ever get another chance to see home."

Mr. President, just give your boys an opportunity to go home for the Christmas holidays and you will increase army morale by 100 per cent. SELECTEE.

Psychological Weapons

Gen. Ludendorff was so impressed in 1918 by British tanks that in a moment of nervous strain he was said to have wired to Berlin, "Frieden um jeden preis" (peace at any price).

The Prussian general staff, which since Frederic has been the nucleus of all warmongers, started in 1918 on a thorough study of tanks. Nobody can now understand how they could produce so many when they were not allowed a single one by the Treaty of Versailles.

Britons and their Allies must now turn out a weapon with the same psychological effect as tanks. It seems fantastic, but why not return to the idea of the Middle Ages and provide soldiers not only with a head-protector but with a sort of complete armor for man-to-man fighting. It could be made of light metal, fashioned with wide reaching arms, and motorized to squeeze the enemy to death. REFUGEE.

The Post Impressionist

Turkey Tactics

There were wars and rumors of wars throughout the world. Regiments were being sent here and there, only to be transferred again. It was July and the old mess sergeant wasn't concerned about turkeys. Of course the Philippine Islands were thousands of miles away from the United States and Christmas presents, for example, were very apt to arrive with the Easter bunny. August, and the old mess sergeant had still neglected to fill out the necessary papers in triplicate. September, and turkeys really did not seem important, for there were even more rumors and the regiment might, in a week's time, be scattered throughout the world. The regiment was sure to leave. Why the colonel's orderly told a corporal and he informed the sergeant, who in turn notified the old mess sergeant that the colonel had refused to let his wife buy new curtains, for in all probability they'd never be able to use them in any house. Nothing more was necessary. In imagination, the regiment was already packed and moved away. The old mess sergeant forgot all about turkeys.

Nor was he concerned in October, but it was different in November. The captain had a worried expression on his face. So did the old mess sergeant. It was the day before Thanksgiving. All the batteries save A had turkeys that the mess sergeants had carefully requisitioned back in July and that had arrived on the November transport. Turkeys and cranberries and all the American trimmings, like mincemeat and pumpkins.

The captain looked at the old mess sergeant. He sadly murmured, "And to think I remembered the old Army tradition and told all of the married soldiers to invite their families to eat dinner with the battery. I invited the colonel and his family and, what's worse, I invited the members of the Congressional committee who are inspecting the island defenses. I was very complimented that they accepted A's invitation."

"Oh," said the old mess sergeant, though he thought something else. He added: "There ain't no turkey, sir. There ain't no cranberry. There ain't nothing 'cept frozen beef an' fish an' beans an' it'd be unpatriotic to have beans on Thanksgiving Day. The Congressmen will think I'm a spy or something."

"They'll think worse about me." The captain frowned. "They'll decide I don't look out for my men and should be relieved. Well, do your best. Goose or duck are a pretty good substitute. So is chicken."

"There ain't no geese or chickens," returned the old mess sergeant. "The colonel's son has got ducks, but they're his pets and——"

"They're sacroscant," interrupted the captain, "commanding officer's property. Don't even look at them. Forget them. Do your best."

"Yes, sir," saluted the old mess sergeant. He stared at the picture of "Washington Crossing the Delaware," on the wall. Well, people had said that couldn't be done, too. The old mess sergeant went out into the kitchen and made what he called a reconnaissance. Mashed potatoes would be mighty good with gravy. He called for a K. P. These heathen red bananas would look like cranberry if they were cooked and mashed and had a bit o' sugar and vinegar added. A good soldier had to be resourceful. He called for another K. P. And then went visiting.

The mess sergeant of B refused to trade turkeys for chocolate pies. The mess sergeant of C wasn't even interested in a month's pay, while that of D refused to listen to any proposition. Sadly the old mess sergeant picked up a stick of wood and began to whittle a turkey's head. It was too bad that wood could not be eaten. He stared out of the window. He could see the colonel's son's ducks floating on their artificial pond. He groaned. Ducks could be stuffed with savory canned oysters and peli nuts and little apples roasted with them. It was useless, however, to think of the impossible. As the captain had said, those ducks were sacred. To touch them would mean court-martial and the guardhouse. The other prospect was almost as bad. The Congressman would look at the table and mention the failure of supply. The colonel would think of morale. The captain would lose his battery. He'd lose his job. He looked at the ducks again and groaned, loud and lustily. They were certainly a pretty picture!

Thanksgiving Day and the mess hall was festively decorated with sprays of bamboo and tiny paper silhouettes of turkeys.

"Um," said Congressman A. "Very, very attractive."

"Soldiers are ingenious," said the colonel, but he frowned. What was that suggestive fragrance?

The captain didn't speak. He stood very straight. There was no use to even hope for the best.

"Um," said Congressman B. "The best duck I've ever tasted. You have a splendid mess sergeant."

"An old soldier," said the colonel with a curious expression on his face. He excused himself and hurried to the window. He closed, then opened his eyes, to shake his head. Strange, unusual. He hadn't heard of any ducks arriving on the transport, nor had he seen any mentioned on the requisition slips.

The old mess sergeant stood near him: "Is everything satisfactory, sir? I've done my best——"

The colonel looked at the pond again. There were his ducks. Silhouettes of black and gray and white against a clear blue sky. He turned to the captain. "Splendid. I admit I was er—suspicious, but there are my boy's ducks. I er—apologize, Sergeant, for hte unworthy idea. Captain, I wish to especially commend your mess sergeant for his excellent meal. It is almost a miracle, after what you told me. Military magic."

And the colonel, later that afternoon, had to repeat his words when his 6-year-old boy came running to him, "Daddy, a bad fairy or something has changed my ducks to wood. Every single one."

"The old mess sergeant," thought the colonel, and sighed. But what could he say when he had already praised the former's Thanksgiving tactics? MADGE ELWOOD.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

Notes On The Carolina Maneuvers

UNTIL I went to the maneuvers this week I had never seen a modern army in motion, and it was soon evident to me that I had not been able to realize what in fact the life of the new army is. I knew, of course, that the appearance of things would be very different from what it was in France in 1918, and indeed from that of the French army in the first winter of this war. Yet somehow in spite of all that I had read, and of all the pictures I had seen, I was as unprepared for the change as a survivor from the horse-and-buggy age who had heard of horseless carriages and thought them amazing but had never imagined how different life would be when automobiles were in common use.

LIPPMANN

THERE IS no doubt, though, I cannot pretend to describe or to define the consequences, that the combustion engine has wrought as profound a revolutionary change in military life as it has in civil life, and that the new army today is as different from the old army as New York City is different from the New York where, as a small boy, I kept a goat in the stable around the corner.

Yet what struck me most forcibly in the Carolinas this week was that the new army is much closer to civilian life of America today than the American army has ever been since the days of the Indian fighters on the frontier. And then I realized that the A. E. F. of 1917-18 came in a phase of military history which was peculiarly alien to American tradition and to American aptitudes. For the mass armies of the First World War were the culminating phase of a European tradition in which highly drilled masses of men were used, without regard for human life or respect for individual capacity, as living weapons.

THE NEW ARMY, on the contrary, is a complex organization of small, teams of men each based on a tank, an armored car, a plane, or some other moving piece of apparatus. Looked at from the point of view of the high command the new army is a tremendous affair of supplies and of communications and the routing of traffic, of deciding where and when and how to move this and that. The men most fitted to direct the new armies are men accustomed to a way of life in which there is large-scale industrial organization with innumerable interlocking factors, and to the operation of modern communications — railroads, trucks, planes, telegraph, telephone, radio. From the point of view of the staff organization the new army is the military aspect of modern industrial and engineering administration. From the point of view of men in the line, the characteristic feature of the new army is no longer great anonymous masses of mechanically drilled robots but innumerable small teams that move about quickly, and within the limits assigned to them by the command above, are rather like the old Indian fighters, using instead of horses their own self-propelled vehicles.

Thus though at the top the new army is large-scale highly technical engineering, the combat troops are to an astonishing degree dispersed and individualized and compelled to rely on their own initiative and resources. I am afraid I am not making myself clear. For until one has seen both the complexity of the administrative organization and at the same time how scattered and self-contained are the combat teams themselves, it is difficult to realize how altogether different the new army is from what we remember of the armies of 1917-1918.

IT IS QUITE evident to me, though I do not wish to draw any far-flung conclusions from it, that for the first time in our history there is a close compatibility between the military art and the American mode of life. We have never been a military people, partly no doubt because we did not have to be but also because the military tradition which lasted from Frederick the Great and Napoleon to the First World War involved a collective use of men which was wholly alien to American individualism. The new military art is, in contrast, very American in its large-scale administrative technique, in its mechanization, in its reliance upon individual initiative and upon teamwork rather than upon regimentation, and in the rapid disappearance of the caste distinctions between officers and men. Americans take to it as readily as islanders take to sea or as the plainsmen and cowboys once took to rough-riding.

It is certain that there is not in all the world today a population so naturally prepared for the new military development as is the American: the young men are used from childhood to motors and radios and traffic and to most of the equipment they handle and to the problems of supply and maintenance. To organize them for a modern army is like making cavalry out of men who have ridden horses all their lives, or like making sailors out of a population of fishermen. The Americans are already in their natural element, and the problem of making an army is the problem of developing sufficient officers who understand the military use of these civilian aptitudes. For it is evident that the rank and file of the American army are by their previous experience in civil life peculiarly capable of becoming exceptionally good soldiers just as fast as there are enough experienced officers to teach them and as soon as the country itself gives them the tools they require.

MY IMPRESSION is that considering the state of the Army 12 months ago, General Marshall and the War Department have done not merely a good but in fact a brilliant work. There is no comparison in equipment or training, so it seems to me, between this army today and the army which went to France in the winter of 1917-18. This army is far better equipped—in fact except for certain highly specialized weapons which it does not yet have in quantity, it is astonishingly well-equipped in the thousand and one things from trucks to shoes and blankets which soldiers require. And though it is obvious that the men themselves are not ready for combat against veteran troops and that a considerable part of the officers are still in the stage of selection and training, this is already a more skilled army than the one which General Pershing had to train within sound of the guns in France.

Anyone whose impression of the new army is based upon the rather disconsolate recruits whom he saw in the streets last spring and summer, looking less like soldiers than like garage attendants out of a job, will revise his opinion if he sees them now in movement with their equipment, roaring along the roads and through the towns, spreading themselves out through the woods, operating their machines, tough, quick, eager, skillful, and very much at ease. For while no doubt this is a young army, a green army, and in some ways far from being a prepared army. It is unmistakably an army and no mere collection of uniformed civilians!

THERE NEED BE no doubt in our minds that this country has what is needed for the development of military power—provided only the indispensable time is granted us. We have always known that we had the industrial foundation of a modern army; what I for one had not realized is that our industrial system has given us, besides the capacity to produce equipment, a population with a great aptitude for using the equipment and for administering the use and maintenance of it. We have also, it is evident, a high command which, judged by the results, has had a very well-conceived plan of organization and training. For otherwise so much could not possibly have been accomplished in so short a time.

If anyone, moreover, has ever doubted the wisdom of aiding the Allies and of lend-lease and of delivering the goods to the Allies, he has only to look at this American army today and realize what infinite value the country has already gotten out of the fact that we have had 12 months' grace in which to prepare for any emergency. If anyone has any doubt today that on the narrowest ground of American self-interest, it is in the highest degree profitable to keep the Axis and Japan in check and at a distance, let him go and look at the army and realize what with more time to train intensively officers and men and to equip them in quantity, the Army is capable of becoming.

Hoover Against AEF

Says Keep Boys Home

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Nov. 19.—Former President Hoover tonight opposed sending American troops to Europe, contending such action would not only be a "futile waste of American life," but would also endanger economic freedom in the United States itself.

He spoke before the Union League Club. The address was broadcast over the Columbia system.

At the same time the former Chief Executive called for a halt to what he said was an attempt to condition American minds artifically for war, asserting that propaganda agencies already were voicing a "preliminary demand" for the sending of American land forces into the European maelstrom.

Describing the European war as a "military stalemate," Mr. Hoover said the primary question before the American people was what effect an American expeditionary force would have on the outcome.

("Just Propaganda"

"We can," he said, "dismiss at once the bogie that Hitler can invade the Western Hemisphere against the modern development of the airplane and our Navy, either now or ten years hence. That idea is just propaganda to create fear in the United States. . . .

"But could the United States break this military stalemate in Europe by adding our military power to that of the British? We can now observe that Russia could not overcome the German army even with her ten million men, 20,000 tanks, 20,000 planes, fighting on her own soil behind her own fortifications with her transportation wholly over land and on inside lines.

"Sending an army from America to the continent of Europe itself today would not be like that of the First World War. Then we transported our men safely to France in installments over a year. This time we would have to land overpowering forces all at once. For us to do that we would need to prepare five million to eight million American boys in addition to the British. . . . It would take us more than five years to build the shipping to transport them. No military expert believes we could land such an army in Europe even if we got overseas. . . .

British Blockade

"The British today have a blockade of Germany as effective as it can be made. The addition of the American Navy does not overcome Hitler by sea power. The increase of our supply of airplanes to the British helps defend England. But the bombing of industrial Germany is not likely to be a decisive factor in this war. . . . From the land, the sea and the air there is every indication that the war in Europe is a military stalemate. And every practical reason of this situation points to the futile waste of American life by sending armies overseas. . . .

"And what becomes of American freedom while we are fighting a long war overseas? Even today our country is justly alarmed that freedom is slipping in America. Truly under intolerance we are slipping in the freedom of expression. Certainly we are slipping in the freedom from fear. Unquestionably with dislocations of employment and rising costs of living we are slipping from freedom from want. The American system is built not on four freedoms but five.

"And absolutely we are slipping from the fifth freedom, that is, the freedom of men to choose their own jobs, the freedom to save for one's children and old age, the freedom of enterprise."

Special Group To Draft New Rules For PUC

New rules of administrative procedure for the Public Utilities Commission will be drafted by a special committee headed by William A. Roberts, former Peoples' Counsel, Chairman Gregory Hankin announced last night.

The committee met yesterday in the P. U. C. offices and was instructed by Hankin to consider a formula of procedure which would be "quick, efficient and inexpensive." The P. U. C. currently is operating under rules adopted in 1915.

Hankin further suggested, as a "guide post," that a procedure be set up whereby all interested parties at P. U. C. hearings be given opportunities to be heard "on all matters of fact and law."

After his appointment as chairman of the special committee, Roberts predicted that redrafting of present rules could not be completed before February 1. The committee agreed to meet again December 2 for first formal discussions.

Hankin was named cochairman of the committee; Elmo Milligan, executive secretary of the P. U. C. was made general secretary and Miss Betty Wilson, a member of the commission staff, was designated as recording secretary.

Other members of the group include E. Barrett Prettyman, president of the District Bar Association and counsel of the Washington Gas Light Co.; Ralph A. Van Orsdel, vice president and general manager, Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Co.; William K. Laws, counsel of the Potomac Electric Power Co.

F. G. Awalt, counsel of the Capital Transit Co.; Ringgold Hart, counsel for the taxicab industry; Clarence A. Miller, attorney; Donald C. Beelar, attorney; Prof. Robert A. Maurer of Georgetown University Law School; Prof. James F. Davidson of George Washington University Law School and Richmond B. Keech, District Corporation Counsel.

Roosevelt vs. Lewis

President's Letter

Following is the text of the letter that President Roosevelt yesterday addressed to Benjamin Fairless, Eugene Grace, and Frank Purnell, and to John L. Lewis:

"Gentlemen:

"At my conference with you on November 14th, I asked you to consider two suggestions. First, I urged that you continue negotiations and that if you did not arrive at a conclusion, you submit the point or points at issue to an arbitrator or arbitrators or anybody else with a different name, and that in the meantime coal production in the captive mines continue. Second, I urged that you consider other methods relating to employment, as the wage question and check-off were not involved.

"You have now informed me that the negotiations broke down without an agreement. The point in dispute has not been submitted to arbitration. Production of coal at the captive mines has been interrupted by strike.

"It is, of course, absolutely clear that no one is asking the coal miners to give up their union recognition on their union wage scales or their union working conditions.

"Under the auspices of the National Defense Mediation Board, certain agreements were reached by the coal operators and the United Mine Workers of America, for the Appalachian area and for other areas.

"Under these agreements the United Mine Workers are recognized as the sole bargaining agent for all the workers in and about the mines. The agreements fix the highest basic daily wage and the highest tonnage rates paid miners anywhere in the world. They provide in many other ways for the security of the mine worker under union auspices. They include union checkweighmen, union grievance machinery and mine committees, union participation in improved safety practices in the mines and in hospitalization. They eliminate unfair deductions from tonnage checked by the union checkweighmen. They eliminate scrip abuses. They provide annual vacations with pay, and other benefits. The steel companies have agreed to all these provisions and are prepared to sign the agreements.

"A single issue, that of the closed shop, remains in dispute, but this issue concerns only five (5%) per cent of the mine workers employed in the captive mines, which is one-half of one percent—one worker out of every 200—of all the mine workers in the United States.

"The National Defense Mediation Board has recommended that these nonunion workers voluntarily join the United Mine Workers of America and share with their fellow workers the burdens as well as the benefits of the union, and I have personally indorsed this suggestion.

The operators also have given to the Mediation Board the assurance in most positive terms that they are not now opposed to and do not intend to oppose, the voluntary growth of union membership at their mines.

"The issue in dispute, however strong the feeling about it may be, does not justify a stoppage of work in a grave national crisis.

"The Protective Wage Clause of the Appalachian Agreement has no bearing on this controversy. If the United Mine Workers sign with the operators of the captive mines an agreement which includes no provision for a closed shop, not a single miner will lose any benefit or advantage which he now enjoys under the Appalachian Agreement. The closed shop contracts that have already been signed will stand.

"In order still further to open the way for settlement of the dispute in the captive mines, I am doing two things:

(1) I am informing all those coal operators who have signed an agreement with the closed shop provision and the nonstrike penalty clause that they will be expected in the interest of national defense to continue to operate under those agreements without change.

(2) I am asking all the operators of the captive mines to reaffirm their assurances by notice to each of their employes that they are not opposed to union organization or collective bargaining and that they do not wish to discourage or stand in the way of any employe who chooses to join the United Mine Workers of America.

"But work in the captive mines must recommence.

"I repeat what I said to the conference last Friday:

"Because it is essential to national defense that the necessary coal production be continued and not stopped, it is therefore the indisputable obligation of the President to see that this is done!"

"I am therefore asking all of you, as patriotic Americans, to accept one or the other of the following alternatives:

(a) Allow the matter of the closed shop in the captive mines to remain in status quo for the period of the national emergency, all other parts of the Appalachian Agreement applying, or

(b) Submit this point to arbitration, agreeing in advance to accept the decision so made for the period of the national emergency without prejudice to your rights in the future.

"For the common good, for the maintenance of defense production, it is imperative that one of these two alternatives be chosen and faithfully performed.

"I am sending a similar letter to the United Mine Workers representatives.

"Yours sincerely,

"FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT."

Mine Chief's Reply

Lewis' reply to President Roosevelt's coal peace suggestions follows:

The President
White House
Washington, D. C.
Dear Sir:

Your letter of this date addressed to Mr. Philip Murray, Mr. Thomas Kennedy and the undersigned is received. Messrs. Murray and Kennedy are absent from the city, as are most of the members of the national policy committee of the United Mine Workers of America. The policy committee will reconvene in Washington, at 10 a. m. Saturday. In the meantime, no officer of the union is qualified to give formal reply to the two alternative proposals which you submit.

Pending consideration of your communication by the full membership of the policy committee, I trust I may be pardoned in making the following observations which I express as my own opinions, and which are in no manner binding upon the membership of our union.

Your proposal (a) suggests an open shop agreement in the steel companies' captive mines for the indefinite and undetermined period of the national emergency. I venture to reiterate the suggestion previously made you that no officer or representative of the United Mine Workers of America possesses any grant of authority to execute an open shop agreement for any period whatsoever. On the contrary, officers and representatives of the union are under express instructions of the most recent constitutional convention of the union, composed of delegates actually employed in the mines to secure for our membership in the captive mining operations "the same contract as the commercial mines." Resolutions containing these instructions was adopted by the convention with the unanimous approval of its 2500 delegates, representatives of the United Mines Workers of America cannot lightly undertake to disregard such express instructions from the men they have the honor to represent.

Your proposal (b) suggests that the union shop provision now in controversy be referred to arbitration with agreement in advance that the umpire's decision will be accepted for the period of the national emergency. Even if the mine workers' representatives possessed the authority to leave the question of the union shop to the arbitrament of an umpire, it is obvious that a judicial decision based upon the logic and merit of our contention would be difficult under existing circumstances. Your recent statements on this question, as the Chief Executive of the Nation, have been so prejudicial to the claim of the mine workers as to make uncertain that an umpire could be found whose decision would not reflect your interpretation of Government policy, Congressional attitude and public opinion. Admittedly, such an umpire could not come from the ranks of labor—he inevitably would come from a position in life peculiarly susceptible to the claims and blandishments of those financial and industrial interests wielding great power and influence in the financial, industrial, social and political life of the Nation. In my opinion, the Mine Workers cannot ignore these pertinent facts so hazardous to their rights and legitimate interests.

These views thus expressed, Mr. President, are merely my own. They unquestionably reflect the hopes of the multitude of mine workers in our Nation, in their desire to be treated fairly by industry and by their Government.

Respectfully yours,
(Signed) JOHN L. LEWIS.

February Budget Of 174,122 Autos Is Fixed by OPM

The OPM yesterday ordered passenger automobile production in February reduced 56.1 per cent compared wth February, 1941, and added that the cut might be far greater because of increasing shortages of steel and other critical materials.

The production maximums will allow the manufacture of 174,122 cars in February, compared with 398,521 in the same month this year.

For the first seven months of the 1942 model year, which began August 1, maximum production will be 1,402,187 cars, compared with 2,325,038 produced in the corresponding period of 1940-41—an over all reduction of 39.7 per cent.

Korean Warns U. S. Against Japan

Korea today with its 23 million citizens under the rule of the Japanese is a huge concentration camp," Dr. Syngman Rhee, first president of the provisional government of the republic of Korea, in exile, declared last night.

Speaking in the Mayflower Hotel before members of the District Society, Sons of the American Revolution, Dr. Rhee warned: "America, look out for these smiling, bowing, polite people. It is only a mask."

The Once-Over

By H. I. Phillips

Private Purkey

Dear ma:

Well, my division is in one of them States witch had the early Thanksgiving and I was not much use to the arsenal of the democrats for a couple of days on account of a general indisposition due to the big turkey dinner witch I ate. I know Napoleon said a army traveled on its stomach but none could travel on the one witch I have got without having rough going all the way. The boys ain't had so much chow since they got into the service and I gess it was so long since I had to say No Thanks to a second helping that I couldn't remember the words.

• • • •

Believe me ma the Thanksgiving manoover was one witch was executed without no mistakes and whatever else this army may be short of it ain't short of knifes and forks, and it don't lack no training in using them in a all-out attack.

• • • •

This was one meal that nobody squawked over so far as the amount of food was concerned, although my division ran out of bicarb of soda around 8 p. m. Looking back on it it seems to me like I spent most of the day eating and not hearing nobody say halt. If a war had broke out Friday they would of had to carried me into it as I ate so much I was a gas victim all night.

• • • •

But I feel better now and will soon be so hungry again that I will be wishing my division can get sent to manoovers in some different state witch has Thanksgiving on the regular date so I could get another turkey dinner. One thing I am certain of is that whatever American is leasing and lending to Europe it is not leasing and lending no turkeys and pumkin pies on account of the double-header Thanksgiving in this country.

• • • •

We did not have to get up early the day after the New Deal Thanksgiving on account of all the buglers was gravy-logged. And we had no drilling all day because most of the officers found their commands could not be heard above their belching. Our captain tried to get away with it by having sergeant say "excuse me" between belches but it was no use.

• • • •

All in all it was a great holiday. We had a camp dance and entertainment. I could not dance as I am strictly a light cargo dancer but the entertainment was good on account of the professional entertainers did not get up in time for the army dinner and were in very good shape. There was movies, too, and you should of heard the boos that John Lewis got in a newsreel. He is now only a few points behind Hitler and about tied with Mussolini in newsreel hissing. Mr. Lewis refused to obey his superior officers' commands and acted like the emergency was for draftees only, but I gess that is the difference between being in a army and being out. I am glad he could only stop the coal supply and not the turkey and cranberry supply anyhow.

• • • •

Well, I expect to be my old self again in a few days but I hope I get no parachute jumping on account of if I jumped out of a plane just now there is no parachute big enough to support my weight. I hope you and pop had a fine Thanksgiving but did not over eat like I did. Your loving son, OSCAR.

P. S. Another load of extra heavy underwear arrived today including mittens. I still have a hunch I am going to get lent to Iceland and to the part with no southern exposure.

Union Reform Is Popular Movement

HAS ANYBODY noticed what our beloved President is doing in this Wrong John Lewis affair?

Well, our beloved President has just nonchalantly stolen the play away from all of us poor monkeys who have been hollering and bellering, denouncing, exposing and viewing with alarm along the union front, and now he is going to call his own signal and step across the line for the touchdown as millions cheer.

PEGLER

People who make a profession of politics have often said that Mr. Big was the cleverest operator of our time in these United States and, chums, here is where he proves up, because if you will examine the play you will observe that he is proceeding with the support of an aroused public opinion, although he has never carried the target for a single minute in the entire brawl. On the contrary, our beloved President sat back there while his union pals yelled "labor baiter" and "union buster" at those who prepared the way for a reform that was very unpopular at first and the most he ever said, when the going was tough, was that a very few union bosses had been faithless to their trust. He gave the unioneers plenty of chances to prove their arrogant stupidity, their lack of responsibility and their criminal character. He let them get away with larceny, mob rule and persecution until Lewis created this break in the game which was bound to come some time.

THERE HAVE BEEN other breaks, but they weren't as inviting as this one, and Mr. Roosevelt's patience and timing have been such as to command the admiration of those who have praised him least.

Howard Smith, of Virginia, and Hoffman, of Michigan; Byrd, Brewster and O'Daniel have raised the devil, and that Smith really worked hard under handicaps and against political hazards, for he was one of the effective, persistent pioneers who recognized the faults of union practice and of the Labor Act and Board and started scrapping when to say a word against any union was like sneering at the Christian religion. It was heresy, it was blasphemy to criticize any union or any of the inflated unioneers and most members of both houses of Congress were afraid to utter a peep. Some of those who kept still, however, were just shrewd and acted on a premonition that Mr. Big would dé something like this and grab the political credit for their work.

The Republicans laid off, as you may have noticed, because they realized that if any reform legislation went through Congress, the New Deal would go before the country and take all the bows. Or, if the legislation failed in a test, the Administration would be in a position to say that the elected Representatives of the people had rejected these attempts to deliver labor with an uppercase L back into the hands of the corporate exploiters.

IT WAS a long time before the newspapers began to venture a few mutters editorially, and I think they would have been even slower to react but for the outrageous demands of the Newspaper Guild under its Communist leadership and the fantastic lies that were told about most of the controversies between publishers and the union.

The guild probably is as much responsible as any other element on the union side for the reform which is now on the way, because the Commies, with their utter cynicism and their savage persecution of dissenters in the craft, made the publishers personally aware of the iniquities of the whole situation. They started timidly, but now most of them are really going to town and the public obviously agrees with the editorial opinion.

AND NOW the unioneers have no other friend in the country to whom they can turn. Mr. Roosevelt was their pal and, with his encouragement, they kicked the public around so ruthlessly that anything the President may do will receive the glad indorsement of the overwhelming majority of the people, And, of course, the Republicans can't very well vote against any reforms that he may suggest either openly or through any of his dummies in Congress. They will have to go along or content themselves with mere haggling over details and phraseology, because this is a great popular movement and the reform is just what they have been demanding in an abstract way.

Well, it certainly has been a wonderful row these last five or six years, but I am afraid it is almost over now, barring a few prosecutions of individual thieves and miscellaneous other crooks, which will be mere police stuff.

Me, I ain't sore at anybody. I ain't even sore at our beloved President for calling his own signal on the 1-yard line. But I have got to get me a new specialty. Does anybody know of a good outrage that needs to be denounced fearlessly?

Litvinoff, Denied Seat On Plane, Hopes To Reach Cairo Today

By the Associated Press

Teheran, Iran, Nov. 11.—Cold-shouldered by minor British officials who barred him from passage to Cairo on a British Overseas Airways transport today, Maxim Litvinoff, Russian Ambassador to the United States, and his wife, prepared to take a Russian plane tomorrow.

Although the British Minister to Iran profusely apologized for the action of a British Overseas Airways plane in leaving the Russian diplomat on the airport, Litvinoff called it an insult.

He appeared to have recovered his temper in the afternoon, however, as he boarded the green-camouflaged, machinegun-turreted Soviet plane which had brought him from Kuibyshev. The plane was unable to take off, however, when a dust storm limited visibility. Litvinoff and his wife conferred with the pilot and it was decided to try to reach Cairo tomorrow.

Earlier they had been refused seats on the British plane.

The British minister, Sir Reader William Bullard, came to the field to see Litvinoff off and showed embarrassment when Litvinoff remarked:

"All would have been much simpler if I had been told yesterday no seats were left in the British plane."

Bullard replied that it was urgent that the British Legation counselor, J. D. Greenway, one of the passengers, leave for India, and said other unexpected factors had resulted in a misunderstanding.

Cairo, Nov. 19 (AP).—Laurence A. Steinhardt, United States Ambassador to Russia, who is en route to Washington, and Sir Walter Monckton, British information service officer, arrived today by air from Teheran.

One of the First Thanksgiving Days With Pilgrims and Indians

Thanksgiving..

In 1789, George Washington, first President of our country, proclaimed the first National Thanksgiving Day. From that day to this there was never greater inspiration to give thanks for our national birthright and all it stands for. With our thanks we harbour the hope that the principles established by the Founding Fathers shall be perpetuated . . . that we shall be able to pass on to future generations a greater . . . richer heritage.

Voteless Women to Map Program Wednesday

The Voteless District of Columbia League of Women Voters will set up its program for the year at a luncheon at noon Wednesday at the Y. W. C. A.

The executive board met yesterday at league headquarters to discuss legislation which will be brought before the membership Wednesday. At that time the league will decide which pieces of legislation it will actively support.

In the meantime, members received this week copies of a proposed program which will be discussed also at the Wednesday meeting. The program, accompanied by a letter from the league president, Mrs. Eugene Callaghan, stated that:

"We aim our program toward the following measures, which are authorized for active support when the board deems the time to be suitable and when there is evidence that the league is prepared to be effective:

"A true merit system for the District of Columbia.

"A tax system based on the ability to pay.

"Assumption by the Federal Government of a fair share of District expenses.

"Safeguarding of Constitutional rights, with special reference to freedom of speech, assembly and press.

"Authorization to the Board of Education to maintain and operate a school system based on recommendations of the Blauch-Powers report.

"Adjustments in educational facilities to meet defense emergency needs.

"Protection of the interests of the public as consumers, particularly as living costs are affected by defense.

"Slum clearance and public housing for low-income groups, with regard for long-time planning.

"Protective legislation affecting wages and hours of women workers.

"A unified public program of child care in line with the recommendations of the Kepecs report.

"Protective legislation for children.

"Public welfare and public health services efficiently organized and adequately financed and staffed ot know and meet local needs.

"Progressive social legislation for dealing with women offenders."

The proposed program is based on a review of previous studies and conclusions in which the league has been interested over a period of years.

The outline was preceded by the statement that "to the league in the District of Columbia, attainment of the right and responsibility of voting is fundamental. With full realization of the difficulty of defining municipal and Federal responsibility for the government of the District, we believe that self-government should be established in the Capital of our democracy."

Blond Furniture Cheerful, Says Decorator

The trend to lighter furniture as emphasized by Miss Henrietta Murdock, right, is shown in the modified Regency dining-room group shown below. The furniture is made of toasted mahogany, ornamented with metal gallery, brass grilles and lion drawer pulls. This pleasant room uses Wellington green and Windsor gold in its furnishings. The rich green broadloom carpet and gold Celanese draperies give a dramatic background for the blond furniture.

Cosmetic Economy

With the Government cornering nitroglycerin for defense purposes, chances are there will be a shortage of fingernail polishes. For nitroglycerin is one of the ingredients used in nail lacquers. Yet, if you will conserve your polish—the majority of women waste more than they actually use—there need be no shortage.

In interest of defense as well as your own pocket book, start now to be thrifty with polish. Here are a few ways of doing so:

Keep a bottle of solvent to dilute polish when it gets too thick. A few drops will thin polish to necessary consistency and make it usable to the last bit.

Remove excess polish from mouth of bottle before closing it. This saves spillage under hot water faucet when you open it next time. Also, keep bottle shut tightly to prevent evaporation.

Use a colorless nail protector to keep polish from chipping and cracking. This keeps nail polish intact two or three weeks.

'Keeping Up With the Joneses,' No Longer a Decoration Motif

By Martha Ellyn
The Post Household Editor

"POSE In home furnishings is on the way out. Today we are decorating in a way to achieve beauty and are not buying certain furnishings because it is the thing to do." Thus did Miss Henrietta Murdock, nationally known decorating authority, here recently for the Hecht Co.'s new store opening, summarize present decoration tendencies.

"No longer do we use broadloom carpet or a certain color in our homes because such is a trend," pointed out Miss Murdock, who is interior decoration editor of the Ladies Home Journal. "We now use the furniture, carpets and accessories that please us most. We have outgrown the old formula for decoration.

Color Use Changes

"Even the use of color has changed," continued the decorator, "primarily because we now have a full palette of color. For example, there are now 25 shades of yellow from which to choose. In former years you would hear a person say, 'I must have bright colors in my "north" room or my "south" room will need a cold color.'"

Gone is the idea that blue is a "cold" color, for today it is made in shades that radiates warmth. In a recent survey, according to Miss Murdock, blue was found to have first place in decoration. Corals and reds she says are also on the ascend.

The present trend to blonde furniture, Miss Murdock believes, is occasioned by the fact that we now have a greater appreciation of woods in their natural state. The natural beauty of wood used in furniture making is now highly valued by most manufacturers and purchasers. Now, instead of applying a new coat of varnish each spring to brighten furniture as our grandmothers did, we polish the wood to a new sheen.

Refinishing Startles

Often someone will tell of "picking up" an old piece of furniture, cloaked in several coats of paint or varnish. To the purchaser's astonishment and delight, the furniture when refinished, proves to be a fine-grained mahogany piece, of silky appearance and rich color. The much-maligned mission and golden oak furniture of the early 1900's, too, Miss Murdock says, often turn into "beautiful swans" with the removal of the heavy finishes.

This decorator's formula for making a drab room into a more interesting one is simple. "Take everything out of the room and revaluate the furnishings. Then carry the most important piece of furniture into the room first, then the biggest chair—perhaps a large wing chair—then a lounge chair, last tables, lamps and accessories. But leave the bridge prizes out if they seem to clutter the room. Put back into the room only those accessories that seem to "do something to give a lift to the room."

Miss Murdock believes that "picture hanging" is on the wane because of the many lovely new patterned wallpapers that are being used. Mirrors she thinks do much to create a feeling of spaciousness and are a great aid in furnishing small rooms. Lamps, too, in her estimation are most important other than for their functional use. They can create not only beauty but also balance if they are of the proper kind and placed correctly.

Local Styles In Architecture Not Essential

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin

WE ALWAYS feel a little sad to see California bungalows in South Carolina and Cape Cod cottages in California. For local architecture and regional customs have the same charm that local accents have . . . We seem to be losing something very charming when we mix them up or breed them out.

And yet maybe that very interchange of ideas is the healthiest thing about the American way . . . It's a sure guarantee against the development of hostile borders and regions suspicious of all those around them. The maintenance of local ways, the jealous guarding of local customs against change has been the curse of Europe and of most of the rest of the world except our own fortunate country.

So on second thought we'll do without so much quaint charm in exchange for this country of ours where people feel at home wherever they are, where different regions understand and enjoy and borrow each other's ways.

A Modern Advantage

This is the advantage really of the modern era—swift transportation and communication have made it possible, in fact inevitable, that local differentiations should be merged, that Oregon and Florida should understand each other better today than adjacent States or counties did in the old days. We should be grateful that these modern ways were perfected before our country became irrecoverably divided by a hundred impenetrable demarkations of race and nationality, as are other great continents in the world today.

The same advantage exists in our borrowing of architectural and decorative ideas from other countries and other times. If in one sense it seems absurd for us to have Georgian English houses and Swiss chalets and Italian villas and French chateaux along the same American street, or for us to mingle the furnishings of may lands in the same house—it is a healthy sign that we're open-minded and cosmopolitan in our tastes. As long as we have that quality we won't be in danger of becoming a continent of hide-bound dogmatic quarreling nations instead of a continent of friendly United States.

How Progress Is Made

Looking back over the thousands of years through which our architectural and decorative heritage has been developing, we can see that the only progress that has ever been made was as each era took what had gone before and added its own thinking and dreaming to it. That's what makes it right for California to build Cape Cod houses, or Greek revival houses . . . that's what makes it hopeful that South Carolina builds California bungalows and Normandy cottages.

So make no apologies for the wide range from which you have assembled the things that make your home peculiarly yours. They belong, just as does your knowledge and interest in classic literature and classic painting. These things are universal and for all those who can understand and love them.

Plum Pudding

Plum pudding not only refers to a delectable English pastry, but to a very rare figure in mahogany. This beautiful wood has a tremendous range and variety in figure; from plain flat cut and striped figures, the patterns in mahogany range to the broken stripes, the mottles, fiddle-backs, crotches and swirls in occasional logs display blistered, burl and many other interesting figures.

Martha Scott's Seven-Day Plan For Beauty

Hollywood, Calif.—No woman can be lovely unless she maps a daily course of action and sticks to it, says Perc Westmore, make-up expert. He calls Martha Scott's "seven-day plan for beauty" the best in Hollywood, because "it doesn't cut a single corner."

Monday is figure day—because weekends are death to diets. Martha steps on her bathroom scales and records her weight, then acts accordingly.

Tuesday is complexion day—on which she carefully scrutinizes her face and neck for the possible need of a mild bleach or special massage.

Wednesday is the day for "corners"—those little things one is apt to neglect, such as plucking stray eyebrows, whitening elbows and knees, etc.

Thursday—Martha experiments with new make-up, it being her contention that a woman should periodically "change her face" and renew interest in herself.

Friday—is for digits. She removes old polish and carefully massages her hands with warm castor oil. This is her day for a pedicure.

Saturday—is her day for a shampoo.

Slim Hips by Daily Exercise

COULD THAT bulge around the middle be a first tiny symptom that your figure is getting middle-aged? It could be—indeed! So exercise!

Often we think we're getting enough exercise to keep us youthfully trim when really certain muscles are rarely used. Fatty pads develop at hips, waist and shoulders. Then one fine day we see we're getting dowagerish.

To beat Father Time at his own game we need to exercise those lazy muscles specially. Here's one of a series of exercises for the waistline that can take off inches.

Lie on back, legs straight, arms out to side. Keep shoulders flat on floor throughout exercise. Pull knees up to chest and roll them over to left side, then to right side. Swing them from one side to another six times. Rest. Repeat 12 to 18 times.

Bulges and figure faults aren't the only worries you can get from weak muscles. There are aching back and feet, constipation!

Our 40-page booklet, "Beauty and Health Through Simple Exercises," gives exercises to correct constipation, aching back and feet. Has exercise routines to beautify neck, arms, shoulders, bust, waistline, hips, legs and posture; to relax tense nerves; to restore figure after childbirth.

Send 15c in coins for our booklet, "Beauty and Health Through Simple Exercises," to the NEW YORK OFFICE of The Washington Post, Home Institute, 109 West Nineteenth Street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address and the name of booklet.

Mesh Bags Accent Belts of Jane Wyman

Hollywood, Calif.—Jane Wyman has resurrected one of her juvenile mesh bags and is wearing it hung from the belt of some of her frocks, in keeping with the very new chatelaine bag mode.

"It's ideal for your 'mad money,'" Jane says, "or looks awfully clever with a bright handkerchief stuffed in it. I often use a lipstick-red linen kerchief when I wear a navy dress and red belt or shoes.

Desperately in Need of Advice, Because Expecting A Child, Boarding School Girl Believes Her Mother Would "Die of Mortification" if She Knew the Truth

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a girl of 16, in a very respectable boarding school. I come from a very nice family, who are as yet ignorant of my state of affairs. I am writing for advice, because I know you will do your best to help me. I am nearly desperate. A week ago, I learned that I am to have a child. If my mother knew of my condition, I am sure she woud die of mortification.

My beau doesn't know yet. He is away at college, studying medicine, and if the truth came to light, it would wreck his career. That is why I couldn't ask him to marry me. And besides, I am too young. Please advise me what to do, as soon as you can; because I am living in terrible suspense. Sincerely, S. M. S.

DEAR S. M. S.: Believe me when I say there is no face-saving solution of your problem, without the cooperation of your mother—in view of your extreme youth and financial dependency upon parental support. And believe me further when I tell you that she will not "die of mortification," when you turn to her for help.

Undoubtedly she will be shocked and heartsick—just as you are—but inasmuch as she is responsible for your very existence, and must assume, for better or worse, the job of seeing you through your minor-age difficulties, I predict that you will find in her a "tower of strength," when you confess to her your bitter predicament, and ask her what to do about it. I am confident, also, that however distrait she may be, when first informed, she will be thankful afterward that you brought the problem straight to her—thus enabling her to plan the solution with maximum discretion.

After you have turned to her for help, she may or may not want to take your father into her confidence. But in any case, she alone (with the exception of him) is vested with legal and moral authority to guide your decision, concerning the course of action to be adopted for the immediate future. For my part, I can only say that adherence to the laws of God and society (which stand as mankind's best interpretation of the immutable Spiritual Laws of Life)—that adherence to these laws restricts you to a choice between (a) marrying your beau before the child is born; and (b) bearing the child as an unwed mother.

However, it is possible that you are thinking in terms of an interrupted pregnancy, as the solution of your problem. If so, you urgently need the solicitously protective advice of your parents—since you would be blundering terribly in rushing hither and thither, penniless and panic stricken, in furtive search of anonymous suggestions on how to negotiate that perilous short-cut out of your difficulty. Regardless of the penalties involved in telling the truth to your mother, this is at once the safest, sanest and least punitive course to take, all aspects of your particular circumstances fully considered. M. H.

Midshipman Has a Problem

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am to graduate from the Naval Academy in December and I would like to send announcements to a number of family friends, whom I have reason to believe would be interested to hear that I had "made the grade." All of them are persons in average circumstances, as are my parents; and on receiving announcements, they might (at least, many of them would) feel obligated to send me a graduation present. And I wouldn't want them to, because I know it would represent burdensome expense, coming just at Christmas time.

How can I let them know that nothing is expected? It might seem presumptuous if I told them I didn't want a present. And in case you wonder why I don't have my parents "spread the word," it is because they recently moved 1500 miles away from our home State, where our lifelong friends live. Can you suggest a way to solve the problem? Your advice will be appreciated. Very truly yours, W. P.

Let Friends Follow Their Inclination

DEAR W. P.: The once punctiliously observed custom of trading a gift—but necessarily!—for an engraved invitation to, or announcement of, a "milestone" event in a friend's life, is gradually mellowing to a "do-as-you-like" sort of proposition. In the matter of commencement cards, in particular, it is no longer considered "de rigueur" to acknowledge the civility with a congratulatory gift.

With practically everybody's children "graduating" once, twice or several times, in process of getting some education, people have sensibly adjusted to this gratifying spread of literacy and academic specialization, by expressing their approval of their young friends' scholastic achievements more often with cordial notes or a hearty handshake (when opportunity affords), than with ye olde time "present."

Dottie Lamour Proves Worth Of Exercise

Australian Crawl Held Responsible For Her Curves

By Ida Jean Kain

WHAT MOVIE star is it on whose picture the boys depend to cheer them up after a long, hard day of soldiering? None other than Dottie Lamour. Her photograph outnumbers those of the other stars four to one with the new army—and a million soldiers can't be so wrong!

The boys themselves advance the most logical of reasons for their choice. They explain that she is "natural, friendly, and a good scout." Of course, the fact that she is so easy to look at might have something to do with it.

There is no question but that Miss Lamour is one of the screen's loveliest figures. If she hadn't been, the sarong would never have become so famous. And you might take note right here that she is not what you would call ultra-streamlined. She weighs all of 116 pounds for her height of five feet, one inch. But, as Bob Hope once pointed out, her weight is "better grouped" than is usual. Call it grouping or distribution, here are her measurements: Bust, 35½ inches; waist, 25 inches; hips, 36 inches.

It would be nice to be able to assure you that a daily dozen is responsible. But she doesn't like calisthenics—mine, or anybody else's. The difference between Miss Lamour and the average woman who doesn't like exercise is that she gets plenty. She swims at least once every day, the way most people like to take baths.

Before she was ever a screen star, she was a swimming star. At the high school contests, she was a menace to the other participants, and she collected so many medals at the Girl Scout meets that she was finally promoted to the post of life saver to give some of the other girls a chance. As a result, she grew up with a beautiful figure and with a genuine enthusiasm for this sport.

Prefers Australian Crawl

Miss Lamour says she prefers the Australian crawl, which is splendid for arms, shoulders, midriff and lower limbs, but that she occasionally switches to the old-fashioned breast stroke which is good for the same measurements and also tends to improve the bust contour.

If you could manage to swim every day for 15 to 30 minutes, you could afford the same scorn for calisthenics. You would get plenty of exercise for the figure-controlling muscles. You wouldn't have to worry about reducing in some spots and building curves in others. But since all the probabilities are against such a program, you have to choose between exercise and the gradual loss of your figure. Fortunately, just 15 minutes of concentrated specific exercise will work magic.

Martha Ellyn's Platter Chatter

Vitamin Favorite

CAULIFLOWER production in Long Island is at its peak. That means that now is the time for including it on menus, for it is an economical buy. And this vegetable is a good source of vitamins, B, C, and G and a fairly good source of calcuim, phosphorous and iron.

Cooking cauliflower is easy but many cooks have difficulty in turning out a palatable dish. I have received many inquiries as to how to minimize the strong odor and flavor which usually accompany improper methods of cooking this vegetable.

Cauliflower is quick and easy to prepare and may be used in different ways—raw, boiled, baked or fried. A head of cauliflower weighing 2 to 2½ pounds serves 5 to 6 persons. The cauliflower may be cooked whole or separated into flowerlets. If you want to boil the vegetable, place it in a large amount of actively boiling salted water. Do not cover. Cook only until tender. Drain, add butter and seasoning and serve.

Cauliflower, like cabbage, brussels sprouts and broccoli, contains a sulphur compound. In cooking, it must be remembered, the pan must not be covered and there must be considerable water. If it is cooked in a small amount of water, with a cover, it will be of strong odor and flavor. Overcooking will produce the same results and cause the vegetable to be soft and mushy and of unattractive brown color.

Cauliflower is excellent when served with Hollandaise sauce when made into a salad, as combined with chopped pecans and salad dressing; when made into French fry by separating the flowerlets, dipping in egg and crumbs and frying in deep fat. Cauliflower au gratin, too, is a flavorsome dish.

Mr. and Mrs. Harper Sibley Guests of Honor At 'After 5' Party Given by Mrs. Cameron

Business for the USO, of which he is national head, keeps former United States Chamber of Commerce President Harper Sibley commuting from New York to Washington a couple of times a week, at least; sometimes more often. He and Mrs. Sibley have taken an apartment in New York for the winter, and unless their plans are changed they won't be back in their Rochester home until next summer.

Now in Washington as the guests of their son-in-law and daughter, the Rev. and Mrs. C. Leslie Glenn, the Sibleys were guests of honor at an informal "after 5" party given yesterday by Mrs. Duncan Cameron at her home, 2539 Massachusetts Avenue. The fete was one in a series Mrs. Cameron has planned for the season. Shortly after the event, Mrs. Sibley started off for Groton, Mass., to spend the President's Thanksgiving with her son, Harper, jr., who is attending Groton, the President's old school.

Mrs. Winslow Arriving Soon

Here and There Dept.: Mrs. Lanier Winslow, whose husband was for many years in the Diplomatic Corps, will arrive here on Sunday from her home in Cleveland, and will be at the Fairfax for several days . . . Donna Julia Brambilla will gather in a few friends for luncheon at the 1925 F Street Club next Tuesday . . . Col. and Mrs. Julius Conrad will entertain at tea this afternoon . . . Mrs. Peyton Van Rensselaer will be the guest of honor when Mrs. Dorothy Lee Ward entertains from 5:30 to 8 o'clock on Wednesday, the 26th . . . Mrs. Grenville T. Emmet will have a small company lunching with her on Sunday . . . and Mrs. Arthur Fowler will entertain at a similar get-together next Tuesday.

The Undersecretary of the Interior and Mrs. John J. Dempsey will be off for the West on Saturday. Stopping first at their home in Santa Fe, N. Mex., they'll stay over long enough for the "Number 2" Thanksgiving dinner and then proceed on to Palm Springs, Calif.

If their plans work out down to the final day, the Dempseys will be away from Washington for an entire month, "But conditions being what they are, there's no telling when we'll have to start back," said Mrs. Dempsey, apprehensively.

"Good Neighboring" a New Way

This story could write itself into the history, of almost any city . . . but probably with such international irony, only in Washington . . . The Girl came here from the South not so long ago. About the same time The Boy sailed up from further south—South America. Both are secretaries, but her job is distinctly of the lower-case variety, while his is capitalized. For he is secretary of an embassy.

They met a year ago, and he asked her if she would teach him English . . . She would, and did . . . One evening, he told her he had left a sweetheart South of the Rio Grande; but the meetings continued, and soon both were watching the moon; lessons forgotten.

Out of a clear sky the other day, though, he told her he had bought a little house and wanted her to help him furnish it. "For two," he added with a twinkle in his eye . . . Would she help him? . . . Of course, she would . . . And now, for a couple of weeks she has been spending all her spare time selecting furniture, rugs, draperies and china for his new abode.

Although she started with a song in her heart, feeling sure a marriage proposal would crown her task, she is now beset by doubts. Is she going to all that trouble for some dark-eyed senorita who even now may be sailing toward Washington; or is she furnishing her own future home? Time will tell. Meanwhile, The Boy seems quite content with the arrangement as it is. After all, he can't lose.

Only rare and deep-rooted Anglophilia could have been responsible for a remark I heard across a Washington teatable recently. A well-known dowager, who is never weary of well-doing when the cause in question has a foreign accent, was seated with a member of the British Embassy. Oddly enough the two somehow got on the subject of the American Revolution.

"Well," concluded the Washington woman, "I'd really rather not discuss it. To tell you the truth, I've always been unhappy that my country ever saw fit to break away from its natural mother."

That's one woman who definitely belongs back in the time of James Russell Lowell's grandmother, of whom it was said, "Every Fourth of July she would dress in deep black, fast all day, and loudly lament 'our late unhappy difference with His Most Gracious Majesty.'"

The Harry Soffees Hosts at Cocktails For Housequests

Representative and Mrs. Harry Buffington Coffee entertained during the 5 to 7 cocktail hours yesterday in their apartment at the Shoreham in honor of their house guests, Mr. and Mrs. John B. Cook, of Scotts Bluff, Nebr.

Representative and Mrs. Coffee have recently returned from New York where they went to meet his brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Scott, last week. The Scotts will return to their home in Nebraska tomorrow night, after a family Thanksgiving dinner with their hosts.

Assisting Mrs. Coffee in the dining room, which had been decorated with red and white chrysanthemums for the occasion, were Mrs. Harold D. Cooley, Mrs. Herron Pearson and Mrs. Charles F. McLaughlin, wives of the Representatives from North Carolina, Tennessee and Nebraska, respectively.

David O. Camerons Making Home Here

Making their home in Washington at 1445 Ogden Street are Mr. and Mrs. David Owen Cameron. A wedding trip to New York City followed their marriage in the Washington Chapel Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints November 15. The Rev. Edgar D. Brossard officiated for the mid-afternoon ceremony in a setting of varied colored chrysanthemums, gladioli and palms.

Before her marriage Mrs. Cameron was Miss Orpha Charlotte Bethel, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gene L. Bethel, of Chillicothe, Mo. She chose a French blue crepe dress for the wedding, and with it she wore brown accessories and a corsage of gardenias. She also wore a hand-forged Swiss chain which both her mother and grandmother wore at their weddings and a blue barrette in her hair which was worn by her mother at her wedding.

Mrs. Houghteling To Spend Weekend In Massachusetts

A gay wekend is ahead for Mrs. James Lawrence Houghteling, who will leave tonight for Boston, to be with her younger son, Frederic, who has two and a half days vacation from his studies at Exeter to celebrate the holiday. Mrs. Houghteling plans to stay with her sister, Mrs. Alexander Grant, in Dedham, Mass., and is hoping the weather will be "fair and warm" when she attends the Yale-Harvard game Saturday.

She'll be back early next week in time to work on the Chinese fete Tuesday and on her own sale Wednesday, when articles from the Grenfell Labrador Industries will be sold at her home, 2424 Wyoming Avenue. The sale hours will be from 10 until 5:30 o'clock, with tea to all who come after 4. Fisherfolk of the Labrador coast and of northern Newfoundland have made all the items which will be on display.

The medical mission of Dr. Grenfel, later Sir Wilfred Grenfel, brought to that outpost of civilization hope as well as health and education. The Grenfell misison has grown into a great enterprise with several hospitals, an orphanage and a large industrial department, where the native women are taught by skilled craftsmen to do expert work. Notable among the products are hooked rugs, charming as to design, many of them being northern scenes of polar bears, reindeers, icebergs and pine trees. There are also woven articles of wool, carved ivories, toys, Christmas cards and Sir Wilfred's books.

Another specialty of the Grenfel Industries are the park or dickies for skiing. These the members of the junior committee will model. Helping on the day of the sale will be Miss Alice Barry, Miss Sylvia Szechenyi, Miss Kitty Hill, Miss Elaine Darlington and Miss Sita Finkenstaedt.

Cocktail Party Given in Honor Of the Browns

Younger-set friends of Ensign Thaddeus H. Brown, jr., received his bride, the former Miss Elizabeth Simpson Kampmann, into their "gang" by turning out to the tune of about 60 for a cocktail party given in honor of the just-wed couple by Miss Jane Davis, James Davis, jr., and Miss Mary Gruman at the Davis home.

It was the first opportunity many of the guests had had to see "Thad and Betty" since their all-of-a-sudden marriage in Warrenton, Va., last Monday. Mrs. Brown is the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Robert Simpson Kampmann, of Philadelphia, and made her debut there. Princeton-Harvard man Brown is now with the public relations office of the Navy Department.

Reception Is Given For the Vandegrifts

Honoring Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Alexander A. Vandegrift, Col. and Mrs. W. C. James entertained at a reception yesterday afternoon in their quarters at the Marine Barracks. Brig. Gen. Vandegrift, who has been assistant to the Commandant of the Marine Corps, will leave November 24 for new Marine base at New River, N. C., where he will be Infantry Commandant of the First Division of Marines. Mrs. Vandegrift will join him there after he has secured quarters in the rapidly building base.

Mrs. James received her guests wearing a shirtwaisted, floor-length dress of green crepe, assisted by her daughter, Miss Emmala James, who wore a jacket-dress of black moire. Mrs. Vandegrift had pinned a corsage of gardenias to her simply-cut black velvet frock.

Assisting Mrs. James at the tea table, which was centered with a bouquet of pink carnations and ivory tapers in silver candlesticks, were Mrs. Thomas Holcomb, wife of Maj. Gen. Holcomb, Commandant of the Marine Corps, Mrs. DeWitt Peck, Mrs. Emmett Skinner, Mrs. John Pott, Mrs. Louis Whaley, Mrs. Walter Wachtler, Mrs. Donald Kendall and Mrs. Harold Rosecrans.

Ned McLeans To Come Here From Colorado

Arriving in time for "Old Deal" Thanksgiving next week will be Mrs. "Ned" McLean, who is coming here from her home in Colorado Springs, Colo., to visit her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Henry G. Meem, at their home on Thirty-fourth Place.

Following by motor will be the former Ann Meem's husband, who will join her here. They hope to lease a house—but are doubtful of the possibilities—here, as they plan to remain in the Capital until March. Accompanying their parents here will be the McLeans' tiny son and daughter, grandchildren of Mrs. Evalyn Walsh McLean.

Wileys Entertain Following Ballet

The United States Minister to Latvia and Mrs. John Wiley entertained at an "after performance" supper party at midnight last for members of the Ballet Russe of Monte Carlo.

It was an informal gathering with guests dropping in at the Wiley home on LeRoy Place following the first performance of the ballet. There will be another this evening at Constitution Hall. Among the guests were the famed dancers Eglevsky and Danilova. The Wileys, who have been here for several months, are stationed in Washington while he is here "on consultation."

Pauline Burke Is Planning Another Book

"Another book up my sleeve? Well, as a matter of fact, I have!" laughed Mrs. Moncure Burke, whose first biography, "Emily Donelson of Tennessee," will be off the presses November 26. Well known in Washington, Mrs. Burke, under of the name of Pauline Wilcox Burke, writes entertainingly of her great grandmother, Mrs. Donelson, who was official hostess at the White House during Andrew Jackson's administration—except for the 16 months that she was "banished" over the Peggy Eaton dispute.

The "other book" Mrs. Burke is contemplating will be a biography of Mrs. Donelson's husband, Andrew Jackson Donelson, nephew of Old Hickory and Charge d'Affaires to the Republic of Texas in 1845 and also Minister to Prussia in 1846.

"Yes, its my first book in 57 years," continued Mrs. Burke who is not at all coy—rather proud in fact—of her 57 years. The only living lineal descendant of Emily Donelson, she writes on the subject with full knowledge and a sympathetic approach. And, still more important to the general reader, this biography is also a running story of the Jackson era. "It took me five years to write it," she says. Descended from prominent colonial families whose roots were deep in the early days of American history, Mrs. Burke has lived here for many years. She formerly made her home on Whitehaven Street—now leased to the George Renchards—and now lives in Chevy Chase.

Tomorrow she will share honors with Mrs. O. W. McNeese at a luncheon at the Senate Restaurant to be given by Mrs. Claude Pepper, wife of Senator Pepper. Guests at the luncheon will be Mrs. Jesse Jones, Mrs. Lister Hill, Mrs. Lawrence Wood Robert and her two houseguests, Mrs. George Earle and Adela Rogers St. Johns, Mrs. Clarence Norton Goodwin, Mrs. Hale Boggs and her houseguest, Miss Louis Tarlton, of New Orleans, and Mrs. James O. Lamkin.

The J. L. Hickeys Honor Couple

Mr. and Mrs. John L. Hickey entertained at dinner last evening in the Shoreham Blue Room in honor of Miss Eleanor Marie Horning and Boyd Gallatin Frey, whose marriage will take place Saturday.

Miss Horning is the daughter of Lieut. Commander and Mrs. George D. Horning, jr., and the prospective bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Frey of Baltimore.

Guests at the dinner included the wedding party. Among those present were Mr. and Mrs. James B. Horning, Mr. and Mrs. Michael Oliveri, Mr. and Mrs. E. P. Beard, Mrs. John Dooman, Miss Lorelle Horning, Miss Eleanor Kane, Miss Courtney Prettyman, Miss Frances Bowie, Mrs. Virginia Stewart, Miss Barbara Lyon, Mr. Matthew Mezzanotte and Mr. Harvey Narcisenfeld.

Hither and Thither, But Here Now

Mrs. Harry Stott Woodard, who with Mr. Woodard and their 16-month-old son, Harry, jr., is back in their own house at 2547 Woodside Drive for a brief pause before leaving for Florida after Christmas. Mr. and Mrs. Woodard, who "Oh, travel most of the time," as she prettily put it, have just returned from a 10-day visit to New York City, where her parents, Dr. and Mrs. A. E. Gessler live. A devotee of the theater, Mrs. Woodard who is a niece of Ilka Chase, never missed going to the theater on her New York trips and often is found back stage afterward meeting various celebrities. And just as popular with the Woodards is racing. Every Saturday and the middle of the week, too, finds them out, probably at Bowie

Cora McIver, H.H. Leich Wed

Wearing her mother's bridal veil, Miss Cora Louise McIver, daughter of Brig. Gen. and Mrs. George Willcox McIver, became the bride yesterday of Harold Herbert Leich, son of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Leich, of Evansville, Ind. The Rev. C. Leslie Glenn read the vows at 5:30 p. m. at the home of the bride's uncle and aunt, Brig. Gen. and Mrs. William Renwick Smedberg.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, was gowned in traditional white satin, embroidered with pearls. A coronet of Duchess lace held the lace veil, which her mother had worn at her wedding. She carried a bouquet of white roses, gardenias and stephanotis.

Pale blue taffeta gowned Miss Nathalie Frances Runyon, niece of the bride, who was maid of honor. Her flowers were yellow roses. Roland Leich, brother of the bridegroom, was best man.

The Hunt Country

By Nina Carter Tabb

THANKSGIVING DAY in the "hunt country" is always brimming with activity with the largest crowds of the season following the hounds and nearly all the hunt clubs holding meets.

Pink coats and other riding togs will be in evidence at the Emanuel Episcopal Church at 8:30 this morning, when the Rev. D. Campbell Mayers holds his Thanksgiving services early so that his congregation can attend before going on to the Middleburg Hunt meet, which starts from Foxcroft at 10. The M. F. H., Daniel C. Sands, always comes to church attired in "pink" on Thanksgiving.

• • • •

The church will be decorated with harvest pumpkins, fruit, canned goods and all sorts of flowers and food, which will be taken to the patients in the Loudoun County Hospital in Leesburg. The Rev. Mr. Mayers will leave with his congregation directly after the services and watch the hunt move off

• • • •

There will be well over a hundred riders in the field when they move off from the Foxcroft race track, and after the hunting is the breakfast at 1 o'clock, for which Miss Noland, joint master with Mr. Sands, has sent out cards. This delicious spread that she treats her guests to annually is looked forward to from year to year. Afterwards the traditional basketball game between the two Foxcroft school teams, the Foxes vs. the Hounds, is played. The guests as well as the girls, old and new, take sides and the place roars with the cheers of the rooters.

• • • •

ONE OF THE largest meets of their season is on today's schedule for Warrenton Hunt, Amory S. Carhart, M. F. H. Starting at Ashland Farm, the Carhart home, the hunt will wind up at a hunt breakfast given by Miss Lea Bouligney, headmistress of Warrenton Country School.

Fairfax Hunt with Stewart Preece, M. F. H., will meet at Ravensworth, the home of Dr. and Mrs. Bolling Lee, who will entertain at a hunt breakfast afterward. Meeting at Phillip Triplett's gate at 10 a. m. will be Old Dominion Hunt, Mrs. John A. Hinckley, M. F. H. Casanova Hunt, Miss Dorothy V. Montgomery, M. F. H., will meet today at Turkey Run at 9:30 a. m.

John H. Hunges and James Asa Shield are joint masters of Deep Run Hunt, which will meet at Libbie and Monument Avenues at 9 a. m. Services at 10 a. m. will precede the Green Spring Valley Hounds meet which will leave from St. John's Church at 11 o'clock. George G. Care, jr., and Stuart S. Janney, jr., are joint masters. The riders will attend church wearing their hunting attire.

Thanksgiving guests of Walter Chrysler, jr., at his home, North Wales, near Warrenton, are Mr. and Mrs. Byron Foy, of New York. They will come to the Middleburg Hunt meet this morning to see their daughter, who is attending Foxcroft School. Mr. Foy will ride to hounds with the hunt, and later with Mrs. Foy and Mr. Chrysler will attend the hunt breakfast and basketball game.

• • • •

ARRIVING IN Virginia tomorrow will be "Head Play," by My Play, and "Red Head," by King Gorin, both owned by Mrs. Silas Mason, of Lexington, Ky. Mr. Chrysler has leased the stallion to stand at "North Wales." Head Play, a chestnut foaled in 1930, has won $109,000 and has beaten Lady's Man and Discovery. The arrival of this good sire in Virginia is of great interest to all horsemen and breeders of good horses, and he will no doubt have many visitors as soon as he rests up from his trip from Kentucky.

Miss Blumer Becomes Bride Of P. T. Hipsley

One the eve of Thanksgiving, at St. Agnes' Episcopal Church, Miss Elizabeth Marbury Blumer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ira Gordon Blumer, became the bride of Percy Tiffany Hipsley, son of Mr. and Mrs. Marion Hipsley. The Rev. Albert J. DuBois read the vows at 8 o'clock last night in a setting of candlelight, palms and white and yellow chrysanthemums.

Herman Ladd sang several numbers before the bride was escorted down the aisle by her father. Her ivory satin gown was fashioned with a sweetheart neckline, long, close-fitting sleeves, pointed at the wrist, and was buttoned down the back. A long tulle veil fell from a coronet of seed pearls which had been worn by the bride's mother. She carried a shower bouquet of roses.

Sister Serves As Attendant

Her sister, Miss Virginia Blumer, who was maid of honor, was attired in gold faille, also buttoned down the back. Her gown featured a sweetheart neckline and three-quarter-length sleeves. Her hat was of the same material, with a veil of net, and she carried bronze chrysanthemums. Gowned in blue faille were her other attendants, Miss Margaret Mary Blumer, her sister, and Miss Patricia Kittell. Their flowers were yellow chryanthemums.

Charles Hipsley was best man for his brother. Ushers were Robert Warner and John B. Dexter, the latter a cousin of the bride. For the reception afterward at the home of the bride's parents Mrs. Blumer received in a gown of royal blue crepe. Her corsage was yellow roses. Mrs. Hipsley, mother of the bridegroom, wore American Beauty crepe and a red rose corsage. Assisting in receiving was Mrs. Thomas L. English, the bride's grandmother, who wore black lace and gardenias.

To Make Home In Fairfax Village

For traveling, Mrs. Hipsley donned a blue crepe dress, which she wore under a black coat, trimmed in skunk. Her accessories were black and her corsage orchids.

After December 1 the couple will live in the Fairfax Village Apartments.

Out-of-town guests at the wedding were Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Davis, Mrs. B. W. English, sr., Miss Julia Anderson and Ernest Anderson, all of Virginia, and Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Bloom, of Baltimore.

Funds for D. C. Work Asked of House Group

The House District Committee yesterday received the recommendation of its Fiscal Affairs subcommittee that it approve a bill granting six million dollars in Federal Works Agency funds to the District government for construction work necessitated by the national emergency.

While the District is not expected to be able to obtain the full amount, due to the fact that the 150 million dollar fund created for emergency work under the Lanham Act has been largely expended, FWA officials last week informed the District Commissioners that two or three million dollars might be found for necessary construction.

Further hope that the District may obtain some funds is offered in the fact that a bill is now under consideration by the House Public Buildings and Grounds Committee which would authorize the FWA to receive an additional 300 million dollars through the act.

Water Funds Asked

Chiefly desired by the District government are projects for improving the local water supply which would cost $1,102,150. Extensions of the sewer system and expansion of the maternity and child welfare wards at Gallinger Hospital also stand high on the Commissioners' priority list.

Representative Hunter (Democrat), of Ohio, Fiscal Affairs subcommittee chairman, urged speedy enactment of the bill yesterday. One amendment offered would stipulate that the District repay the borrowed amount in 10 years instead of the 25-year period provided in the bill in its present form.

Dr. Thomas Parran, surgeon general of the United States Public Health Service, will be requested to appear before the District Committee next Wednesday to testify on the advisability of giving periodic examinations to restaurant employes as a means of discovering communicable diseases.

Clash With Ruhland

Representative Schulte (Democrat), of Indiana, acting committee chairman, announced this yesterday after committee members clashed with Dr. George C. Ruhland, District health officer, on the value of enacting such legislation for the District. Dr. Ruhland also will appear at the hearing.

Characterizing sanitary conditions in restaurants here as "intolerable," Representative Schulte declared, "there are 435 members of the House and 300 of them have been screaming their heads off over conditions. They pay terrific prices for fourth-grade food."

Dr. Ruhland brought ejaculations of surprise from committee members with the declaration that transmission of venereal diseases is a "bugaboo that is greatly overrated."

Mrs. Annadale's Funeral Tomorrow

Funeral services for Mrs. Annie Annadale, 67, of 220 Tennessee Avenue Northeast, lifelong resident here, who died Tuesday, will be held at 2 p. m. tomorrow at Lee's funeral home, with burial in Glenwood Cemetery.

Mrs. Annadale's survivors include her husband, James M. Annadale; a stepdaughter, Mrs. Rachael J. Snapp, 1332 Belmont Street Northwest, and a brother, Seaton W. Trunnell, superintendent of the West End Postal Station.

Mrs. Annadale was a member of the Christ Episcopal Church.

War Department Outgrows New Home

War Department has orders to keep its staff in Washington down to the absolute minimum . . . its activities are being decentralized whenever possible. Its personnel here, it's said, won't be greatly expanded if the proposed supplemental appropriation of more than $6,500,000,000 is voted. In the field, however, reports are heard, the new appropriation would require approximately 150,000 additional employes. War Department officials won't estimate the increase that will be needed.

War, like other defense agencies, is stymied for space. When its new building in Arlington is completed—in about six months—several thousand additional employes will be hired. Incidentally, it's now evident that all the department won't be able to get into the huge new Arlington building. It won't be large enough. War has more than 25,000 employes here now, just about the number the new building can house.

War's Washington personnel is about 7 per cent of its total. It has more than 400,000 employes, a record for a single department. Many hundreds have been transferred out of Washington since the emergency, but many thousands have been brought in . . . Procurement Division is hiring calculating machine operators and audit clerks from Civil Service rolls. Eligibles in the States refused the jobs and the Commission was forced to certify many who claimed the District as their legal address . . . FBI receives an average of 26,000 sets of fingerprints daily.

Carmody Appointed

Federal Works Administrator John Carmody, as predicted here many times, was nominated yesterday by F. D. R. to the Maritime Commission. The President will now appoint Brig. General Philip Fleming, Wage and Hour administrator, to succeed Carmody. And you can expect the genial general to do some housecleaning if he's given the authority. But if he's hamstrung like 99 per cent of the administrative officers, you can expect defense housing and defense public works to continue in its customary muddle.

Of-All-Things Department: Renovation of Temporary Building E, the old World War structure on the Mall, has been delayed because the contractor had difficulty in getting priorities on materials. Oh yes, the building is being occupied by OPM's Priorities Division. It's about 50 per cent occupied.

Much-criticized Defense Housing Coordinator Charles Palmer apparently feels sure of his job. Employes report he has hired a super-super efficiency expert at a fancy salary. The expert is reported to have recommended a number of salary cuts . . . which may account for his unpopularity . . . Civil Service exams: Marketing specialists, Surplus Marketing, $2600 to $4600. Tobacco inspector, Agricultural Marketing Service, $1620 to $3200. Maintenance Supervisor, $2900 to $3500, Civil Aeronautics Administration. Carpenter helper, $1260 to $1320, Fort Myer.

Alfred Charles, War information assistant, will replace Ernest Von Hartz as OPM's Production Division information chief. Von Hartz returns to active newspaper work . . . Wilder Foote, a Vermont newsman, will be appointed to handle Lend-Lease information . . . President Roosevelt has issued an executive order that will permit the "unfreezing" of the jobs held by persons appointed from the emergency replacement list prior to July 1. The order permits promotions and transfers . . . The Congressional public power bloc, led by Representative Rankin, has its ax out for the OPM for refusing REA priorities on copper wire to string power lines. Meantime, future REA construction is in doubt and the agency's many employes are speculating on what's ahead.

Government press agents have been instructed by Civilian Defense to get out releases on the 150th anniversary of the Bill of Rights . . . Civil Aeronautics Administration is hiring new employes at the rate of 150 monthly. It now has a staff of 6591, of which 1200 are in Washington. CAA continues to permit employes to transfer to other agencies despite the fact that it loses seven employes to other agencies to every one it gets in return.

Red Tanks—Green Light—Blue M. P.

While mimic battle raged noisly in the streets of Albemarle, N. C., yesterday, the forces of law and order held sway as usual.

Red tanks streamed through the city while a Blue M. P. obligingly flagged them through the town's busiest intersection.

19-Year-Old Private Killed; Two Buses Collide; Boy, 15, Suffers Skull Fracture

Eight homeward bound passengers were injured and 92 others were shaken up at about 5 p. m. yesterday when two Capital Transit buses collided at Vermont Avenue and K Street Northwest.

A 15-year-old boy was critically hurt when knocked from his bicycle by an automobile near his home.

A United States Marine private was killed, two companions riding with him were injured and a soldier lost a leg in accidents in nearby Maryland and Virginia.

Sudden Stop

The two buses, both marked Georgia and Alaska Avenues Northwest, were traveling west on K Street, one behind the other. According to police, the driver of the forward vehicle, John Bush, 27, of 1336 Bryant Street Northwest, reported an automobile moving in the opposite direction made a left turn north into Vermont Avenue Northwest, causing him to slam on his brakes. The driver of the second bus, Dudwood R. Wigglesworth, 26, of 6634 Georgia Avenue Northwest, asserted he did not have time to stop, causing him to hit the rear end of the other bus.

Two persons treated for bruises at Emergency Hospital were said to be Miss Anne M. Higgs, 28, 1673 Park Road Northwest, and Vincent D. Simonton, about 30, 1679 Newton Street Northwest.

Suffers Skull Fracture

The youthful cyclist, Augustus Rongus, of 1338 North Capitol Street, was struck at North Capitol and O Streets. He suffered a skull fracture and back injuries. Police said the automobile was driven by Earl V. McKenny, of Silver Spring.

Pvt. Donato Dinovelli, 19, attached to the Marine base at Quantico, Va., was killed when the automobile in which he was riding left the road near Triangle, Va. A verdict of accidental death was returned yesterday at an inquest held in Hall's Funeral Home, Occoquan, Va. Pvts. Thaddeus J. Czubryt, 18, and Robert W. Dupre, 20, were treated for serious injuries received in the accident, at the Marine base hospital.

Pvt. Benjamin F. Riggs, 24, Negro, stationed at Fort Belvoir, Va., lost his right leg in a crash at Woodville, Md.

Harrington Named To Police Post

Police Sergt. Joseph Harrington, veteran traffic patrolman, yesterday was placed in charge of the Hack Inspector's office by Maj. Edward J. Kelly, superintendent of police.

Harrington will replace as the squad's head Acting Sergt. Robert Walker, who will remain in the office as Harrington's assistant. A second acting sergeant, John Lindus, was transferred from the public vehicle bureau to the traffic division.

Car Loading Platforms To Get Double Arrows

Double arrows, pointing in opposite directions, will replace triangular reflector markers on streetcar loading platforms where traffic is permitted to flow on either side, traffic officials announced last night after a conference.

Because of a shortage of the triangular signs, the Capital Transit Co. substituted arrows on certain platforms along Wisconsin Avenue Northwest. Many complaints followed.

Priorities on Protective Services

Bolles Orders Speed-up in Civilian Defense; Complete Raid Warden's Post Displayed

DISTRICT'S FIRST AIR RAID WARDEN POST—The District's first air raid warden post was set up yesterday in a garage in the rear of 4934 Indian Lane Northwest. The two volunteer wardens are Fred J. Eden (left), of 4726 Brandywine Street Northwest, and Col. Sidney F. Mashbir, of the Indian Lane address

Director Convinced Capital Is One Of 'No. 1 Targets' in United States

Priorities on protective services, with special accent on air raid warden set-ups and immediate organization of emergency feeding units, were ordered yesterday by Col. Lemuel Bolles, director of the District Defense Council.

Col. Bolles issued the order after returning from a meeting of Third Civilian Defense Area officials in Baltimore, where he "became more convinced than ever that Washington is one of the No. 1 targets of the Nation."

As a speed-up illustration of what is expected of air raid wardens, whom he terms the most important persons in the civilian defense program, Col. Bolles yesterday morning asked Col. Sidney F. Mashbir, deputy warden for the American University Park area, to "set up his warden's post immediately."

Complete Unit

Col. Mashbir was ready for photographers at 3 p. m., the garage of his home at 4934 Indian Lane Northwest, complete with sandbags, tables, chairs, helmets, typewriter, telephone, first aid kit, radio, log book, rope—and all the other equipment specified by the Office of Civilian Defense.

The emergency feeding kitchens—one for each of the District's 60-odd defense areas—will be headed by women. Col. Bolles asked the defense chairmen to start "recruiting" immediately. Instructors for the women and their aides will be provided through the central council, if not available in the immediate neighborhood, he said.

In addition to air raid wardens, the "protective services" of civilian defense include rescue squads, fire and police auxiliaries, mobilization of utilities, and the like.

The 35 deputy air-raid wardens in the first class showed last night that their instruction hasn't been going in one ear and out the other.

Meeting at the Firemen's Training School, 635 North Carolina Avenue Southeast, they had a practice session of actually extinguishing dummy incendiary bombs.

Lieut. Comdr. J. P. Wetherill, chemical warfare officer at the Navy Yard, directed the session.

Other Developments

Other defense developments yesterday included:

A mass meeting of citizens of the Bradbury Heights area at the Bradbury Heights Methodist Church. Speeches outlining the civilian defense program were made by E. S. Alverson, defense chairman of the area, and by Richard Barr.

Announcement by the D. C. Red Cross Chapter that an instructors' refresher course would open Friday night at 7:30 o'clock at 1730 E Street Northwest. Nurses interested in national defense work will be given an opportunity to participate. The course will continue through December, on Wednesday and Friday evenings, and will be taught by Caroline E. Thomson, director of instruction for the D. C. chapter.

Federal Fund For Civilian Defense Urged

The Southwest Citizens Association last night went on record as favoring a congressional appropriation for civilian defense activities in the District.

The association, meeting at the Southwestern Branch Library also authorized its commercial development committee chairman to request the District Engineer to put a fence at the end of N Street if no pier is to be built there. The street runs into the Washington Channel.

The association further voted $10 to the Community Chest. An exhibit of pastels of animal subjects by John Clements was shown. Robert Hall, deputy air-raid warden, discussed defense activities.

Sixteenth Street Highlands

Plans to convert a vacant lot at Fourteenth and Kennedy Streets Northwest which has long been an "eyesore" to the community into a beautiful park was embodied in a resolution adopted by the Sixteenth Street Highlands Citizens Association at its meeting last night.

The District Commissioners recently refused an appeal to rezone the property to permit erection of a grocery store, it was said. Because of this, members felt now is the time to get action.

Arguments were advanced that because it was a particularly dangerous corner from the standpoint of traffic hazards that any edifice would add danger at that point. A copy will be submitted to the National Capital Parks and Planning Commission. W. E. Stoutamyer, president, presided at the meeting.

Mall Project Set Despite Protest

War, Navy Building Will Be Erected Over Complaints By Planning Board

Disregarding objections of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, the Public Buildings Administration yesterday went ahead with plans to build a $466,000 temporary building on the Mall, south of the Munitions Building.

Contract for the work has been awarded the Charles H. Tompkins Co. of Washington, providing for a contractor's fee of $23,500.

The building, to be known as Temporary Building "W," will be a sister building to Temporary Building "N" behind the Navy Department Building and will house War Department and Navy Department employes. It is to be completed within 70 calendar days. Work is expected to start within five days.

Objections raised by the planning board included the following:

1. Erection of the building would absorb valuable parking space needed by the thousands of employes using the Munitions Building.

2. The structure would be too "unsightly" for the Mall.

3. Bringing more workers to the area would only add to traffic congestion which has already hampered movement to and from buildings already erected.

The building will be a two-story structure with 80,000 square feet of floor space to accommodate 700 employes. It will be 662 feet long and 80 feet wide.

Sliver of Woman Victim's Glasses Convicts D. C. Driver

A sliver of glass from the spectacles of a 70-year-old District traffic victim late yesterday convicted Louis Bonnet, 45, of 1518 Whittier Place Northwest, of negligent homicide at Police Court.

Though the defendant denied his automobile struck and fatally injured Mrs. Marie Schwertner, 700, of 200 Rhode Island Avenue Northeast, last December 23, he was unable to explain away the presence of fragments of the dead woman's eyeglasses on the running board of his automobile.

The jury of ten men and two women deliberated 40 minutes before deciding upon the guilty verdict. Judge Walter J. Casey set November 28 as the date for sentence.

Mrs. Schwertner was struck as she crossed Rhode Island Avenue in front of her home. She died a few hours after the accident at Sibley Hospital.

Bonnet, who was driving along the thoroughfare at the time, stopped his machine two blocks from the scene. He told the jury yesterday he was forced into the curb by another motorist and did not know anything about the accident.

William E. Chesser, a soldier assigned to Fort Bliss, Tex., and who was brought here for the trial, testified that he was driving directly behind Bonnet's machine when he saw "a black object, like a lap robe, fly out of the car."

Bonnet, he declared, stopped his machine voluntarily two blocks away.

Lieut. William J. Liverman, of the Accident Investigation Unit, told the jury of the eyeglass lens. He said the fragments of glass were found on the left running board of Bonnet's car and that the front of the machine showed brush marks and several dents.

The glass particles, Liverman stated, were taken to the Franklin Optical Co., 1006 Connecticut Avenue Northwest, where Ernest Howarth identified them as part of the lenses made for Mrs. Schwertner eight years before.

Howarth so testified at the trial.

Liverman and Assistant District Attorney Brewster Marshall, the prosecutor, established the necessary element of negligence on the part of the defendant with testimony that the windshield of his machine was very dirty. Marshall repeatedly told the jury that this fact was a violation of local traffic regulations.

Bonnet, defended by Attorney F. Joseph Donohue, said that dents to fenders on his car, were caused in an accident in Baltimore the same day.

Army to Buy 38,728 Acres In Virginia

Army officials said yesterday that the War Department plans to buy an additional 38,728 acres of land in Caroline and Essex Counties, Va., for the A. P. Hill military reservation, nearly doubling the existing training area.

Extension of the reservation will mean hundreds of families will have to move from homes and farms within the next few months, just as hundreds of others were moved out last spring when the Army first went into the area.

Funds for the project are included in the seven-billion-dollar supplemental budget estimate sent to Congress Monday. The sum of $1,206,000 has been tentatively earmarked for purchase of the Virginia land, it was said.

The area is located south and east of the highway between Bowling Green and Port Royal, southeast of the present military reservation. Officials declined to give more definite boundaries, as they said they cannot tell how much of the land can be bought with the sum allocated.

Last spring, the War Department said that a 70,000-acre tract was desired for the reservation and that more than half of it would be bought immediately. Possession of the remainder would be required this fall, it was said, while ultimately 110,000 acres in all might be required.

To date, about 45,000 acres have been taken over, while the present addition of 38,728 acres will complete the reservation, it was stated.

It appeared likely yesterday that possession of the land will not be required until sometime after the first of the year. Purchase must await passage of the supplemental appropriation bill, and leaders in Congress plan to delay its consideration until next month.

Occupational Therapy Room Dedicated at Children's Hospital

FIRST PATIENT to visit the new occupational therapy room dedicated yesterday at Children's Hospital was Billy Harris, 8. Here, Miss Lena Hitchcock, director of the hospital's occupational therapy department, helps Billy to draw. Watching with interest is Mrs. John Boyd Stanley, niece of Dr. Walter Willard Boyd, who spoke at the dedication

A small boy in an Eton suit, a smaller girl in a blue gingham dress, and their tiny cooing brother yesterday pulled three strings and thus turned over a child's paradise to Washington's handicapped youngsters.

Children's Hospital was the locale of the scene, where a new occupational therapy room was being dedicated.

The strings were attached to a curtain underneath which was a plaque reading, "Dedicated to Katherine Dorr Willard Boyd by her grandchildren, Walter Willard Boyd, jr., Josephine Abbott Boyd and John Covert Boyd, III."

Children Unveil Plaque

The children, 7, 3 and 1 year old, respectively, unveiled the plaque, as their father, Dr. Walter Willard Boyd, told the more than 100 guests at the dedication that "this room is given by children to the service of children, and it can never be quite finished as it must answer a continuing need."

Accommodating 50 youngsters at one time, the room is equipped with playthings, not only for fun's sake but for health's sake.

A bicycle saw for making jigsaw puzzles will help to stretch tight tendons. The making of posters is part of the treatment for children suffering from spastic paralysis.

Playing Returns Function

Miss Lena Hitchcock, for nine years the hospital's director of occupational therapy, said "Playing with these toys returns function to the youngsters' injured muscles and minds."

Miss Hitchcock has been carrying on her work in a room large enough for only 15 children.

Outside the new room is an artificial pool where children may sail boats. At the side is a large sandbox.

Charles D. Drayton, president of the hospital's board, accepted the gift from Dr. and Mrs. Boyd. The Rev. Z. B. Phillips delivered the invocation. Dr. Boyd was introduced by Dr. Joseph Stiles Wall.

Nazi Agents Will Be Hit By New Law

By Dillard Stokes
Post Staff Writer

A stinging crack down on thousands of Nazi propagandists who have been evading American laws will follow enactment of the new Foreign Agents Registration Act proposed by Senator McKellar (Democrat), of Tennessee.

Judiciary Committee action is scheduled Monday on the measure, sponsored by the Justice and Postoffice Departments. Senator Van Nuys (Democrat), of Indiana, chairman of the Judiciary Committee, said consideration might be completed that day.

Provisions urgently needed by the postal inspectors and the propaganda squad of Department of Justice special prosecutors are included in Senator McKellar's proposal. The definition of a foreign agent is broadened to square with the facts and the penalties are more than doubled, to five years in prison or $10,000 fine, or both.

To Safeguard Frank

The new act strikes at foreign agents who use the mails, requiring them to file copies of everything mailed with the Attorney General and the Library of Congress. The material would have to show who mailed it. This would protect the Congressional frank—recently widely used by propagandists, although members said they did not authorize it. There is now no effective law against such an abuse.

Foreign agents who use this country as a base from which to attempt political propaganda in any of the American republics are within the terms of the proposed law.

The new act defines a foreign principal as any government of a foreign country, or any part of a country, any official of such government, any person outside the United States not a citizen of this country, any foreign company or any American company subsidized directly or indirectly, in whole or in part by any foreign principle.

Any American agent of such a foreign principle is required to register, tell who pays him and what he does. The definition of an agent is broadened to include any person who acts as a propagandist, collects information or money for a foreign principle (except legitimate news services which are 80 per cent American owned) and any active or reserve member of any foreign military force and any foreign government civil officer.

The act brings under the law foreign agents operating in any place "subject to the jurisdiction of the United States," in addition to the States and Territories.

Enforcement of the registration laws would be transferred to the Department of Justice.

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

ALFRED MILLER, JR., the 9-year-old Liberty, Mo., boy whose courageous smile two years ago led surgeons to make a last-minute decision which saved his leg from amputation, isn't quite satisfied with his football punting. He's going to have an operation November 30 "to fix up the ligaments." About his leg, Alfred says, "when I kick a football I can't get it up far enough for a good punt over the schoolhouse."

Priorities Delay Completion of School Construction

Restrictions of the Office of Production Management have made necessary the revision of previously approved completion dates on 11 school construction projects here, in one case as much as five or six months, the Board of Education was advised yesterday.

A resolution was adopted at the meeting, resulting from a report of the District Fire Marshal, early in October, which disclosed only 30 of the city's 180 schools were safe fro. fire dangers. The resolution requires all custodians to report daily to principals that all egress doors have been checked and are in operable condition.

In a letter to the board, Lieut. Col. B. C. Snow, assistant engineer commissioner, commenting on the Spingarn High School, Twenty-fourth and Benning Road Northeast, said that OPM requested the District "to redesign the project and to file another request for a priority rating in about five or six months." This project was to be completed last month.

Other schools included were: Abbot Vocational School, was to have been completed January 17, 1942, date advanced to February 21, 1942; Adelaide Davis Elementary School, from December 6, 1941, to April 11, 1942; a junior high school, Forty-ninth and Washington Place Northeast to be completed June 4, 1942, no change.

School building to replace Brent, Dent, Lenox, and French Schools, and one to replace Cranch, Tyler and Van Ness Schools, from June 4, 1942, to June 18, 1942; Francis Junior High School, to receive a new auditorium roof was said to have received a low bid which exceeded the limit of cost established by the 1942 appropriations act. Additional funds have been requested.

Woodrow Wilson High School, plans and specifications have been completed to finish six classrooms and it was said the project will be advertised for bids as soon as the requested priority rating has been granted. Completion of additions to the Benning Elementary School and the Van Ness Elementary School, have been delayed from February 14, 1942, to May 9, 1942.

Among other moves by the board yesterday was a recommendation approved to establish a kindergarten at Bellevue.

Go to Suburbs, Officials Urge Newcomers

If newcomers to Washington would agree immediately to go to the suburbs to live, the problem of defense housing officials would be much ilghter—and everybody would be happier quicker.

There are no apartments downtown, and scarcely any rooms either, but it is difficult to make would-be renters believe it, the officials declare.

Even harder for newcomers to believe, according to William Press, of the Defense Housing Agency, is the matter of rent.

"Those coming from small towns are hit hardest," he said. "They expect to find an apartment for $20. There simply are none. The most desired units, one and two rooms with kitchen and bath, are not even available in the outlying areas."

The District of Columbia Zoning Commission will act December 5 on proposed zoning amendments to permit families in restricted and semirestricted areas to take in more than two roomers "during the emergency."

Under present regulations, more than two roomers makes a home a rooming house. Houses with fewer than ten roomers, however, do not have to be licensed. It is the latter fact that has many housing and welfare leaders worried.

A recent survey by the Police Department showed 1507 rooming houses with sleeping accommodations for ten or more persons. Wade H. Combs, superintendent of licensing, said yesterday that only 14 licenses had been granted.

"We cannot grant the license until they have an occupancy permit from the building inspector's office," he said.

Robert H. Davis, building inspector, said that between 300 and 400 of the houses have been inspected but "that evidently they have not yet made the adjustments needed before the permit can be granted."

Inspection is moving as rapidly as possible with present personnel, which was not increased when the licensing provision went into effect in the summer, he pointed out.

Col. Sims reported having chased the car for 9 miles when the accident occurred, after having first observed the machine exceeding the speed limit.

Good Neighbor Countries Spur Chest Appeal

Messages of encouragement from good neighbor countries last night spurred on to greater efforts the good neighbor volunteers working in the Community Chest campaign.

"Since the first Thanksgiving Day, there has never been a time when the significance of this North American festival stood out so clearly," wrote Leighton McCarthy, Minister of the Canadian Legation, to John Clifford Folger, general campaign manager of the Chest.

"As we face together," said the Canadian Minister, "a world-wide threat to the security of our institutions, we must remember too that there are other obligations near at hand which call for willing sacrifices.

"The appeal which the welfare agencies of this city are making through its Community Chest is one that cannot be overlooked, and, as we marshal our strength in the defense of the right to live as good neighbors and not as slaves, it behooves us to remember the good neighbor policy," he said.

Other messages of encouragement to the Chest were received from C. E. Alfaro, Ambassador from Ecuador, and Diogenes Escalante, Ambassador from Venezuela.

The Ambassador from Ecuador stated: "It may not be amiss to remind all the prospective givers that charity begins at home and that the way in which they perform their duties in their own midst will reflect itself in the good neighbor spirit of which we are so much in need among the nations of our hemisphere."

The Venezuelan Ambassador wrote that "Chest activities are deserving of everyone's interest and respect since they are indiscriminate in scope and serve the poor and helpless of the city, whether they be Americans or unfortunate foreigners stranded far from their native land and in want."

Meanwhile more than 600 children will celebrate the holiday in Chest-supported social agencies. Many of the children are not ill but are taking shelter there today because of break-up in their homes, death of a parent, or some other crisis.

Because of past generosity of Chest givers, they are today having turkey and "all the trimmins' "in St. Ann's Infant Asylum, St. Joseph's Home and School, St. Rose's Technical School, St. Vincent's Home and School, Florence Crittenton Home, Washington Home for Foundlings, and Episcopal Home for Children.

Captor of Axis Vessel Lives In Washington

CHANDLER

Capt. Chandler makes his home here at 2811 Albemarle Street, while his father, Rear Admiral Lloyd H. Chandler has lived in Washington since his retirement from the Navy. The Omaha's commander is a graduate of the Naval Academy, class of 1915 and served on the destroyer Conner operating out of Brest, France, during the World War. He was a basketball and lacrosse star at Annapolis.

The younger Chandler is an expert in explosives and holds a master's degree from the University of Michigan in chemical engineering. From 1935 to 1938 he was assistant anval attache in Paris, Madrid and Lisbon.

Born in Annapolis in 1985, Capt. Chandler married a Washington girl, Beatrice B. Fairfax. They have one daughter. He is a member of the Chevy Chase, Army and Navy Town, and Army and Navy Country Clubs.

Soldiers to Get Turkey Dinners

More than 20 soldiers from nearby camps may thank the Buckingham Civic Association in Arlington, Va., for the home-cooked turkey dinners they will eat today.

At the last meeting of the association it was decided to place placards in the stores in the neighborhood asking persons interested in sharing their Thanksgiving dinner with a soldier to leave their names. Mrs. Samuel J. Rodman is chairman of the committee, and Edgar Warren is president of the group.

Postlude

Ballets and Symphony Lovely To Look at, Delightful to Hear

By Ray C. B. Brown

National Symphony Orchestra collaborates with Ballets Russes de Monte Carlo on Wednesday night in Constitution Hall. Program: "Saratoga" with libretto and music by Jaromir Weinberger, "Labyrinth" with libretto by Salvador Dali to Franz Schubert's Symphony No. 7, "Capriccio Espagnol" with libretto by Leonid Miassin to music by Nikolai Rimski-Korsakov. Choreographer: Leonid Miassin. Conductor: Efrem Kurtz.

Making the sixth appearance with the National Symphony Orchestra in as many seasons, the Ballets Russes de Monte Carlo put two new ballets and one hold-over on display last evening in Constitution Hall to the gratification of a large assemblage of spectator-auditors. One uses the compound noun for the logical reason that half the pleasure derived from witnessing symphonic choreography is the following of musical design in the evolutions on the stage, and the designs are patent only when the scores are played by a large orchestra. Inadequate as the staging has to be in our orchestra's home hall, that disadvantage is balanced by the excellence of the musical warp in the weaving of patterns.

BROWN

Jaromir Weinberger's "Saratoga" was the first novelty on the program, and proved to be pure entertainment with a mixture of classical and contemporary techniques in the dancing and a parallel amalgam of styles in the music. Selecting the Saratoga race-track of the "nineties" as the scene, the librettist-composer cleverly wrote music which has for its basis the style of the popular dances and songs of that period, and to vary that slightly cloying manner put in passages of mildly dissonant harmony for the comic episodes. The music is fresh, tuneful and sparkling in instrumentation.

Alexandra Danilova danced the leading feminine role of the young girl whose mother (Tatiana Chamie) tries to induce her to marry a rich man (Nikolai Beresov) but has to be reconciled at the end to a love-match with a dashing jockey (Frederic Franklin), and marry the rich man herself. This is plot enough for any musical comedy, and that is exactly what "Saratoga" is, and all the better for being without any dubious singing. The choreography is vibrant and interesting, with several novel touches, such as the pantomime of the race and the leap-frogging of the jockeys.

The first thing that occurs to me about "Labyrinth," the second novelty, is to wonder how Salvador Dali happened to select Schubert's seventh symphony as the musical base for a highly sophisticated treatment of the Hellenic myth of Theseus and Ariadne. Mythology was the last thing that Schubert would have thought about while composing the work, for he was a pure romantic if there ever was one. Perhaps Dali was slyly poking fun at Schubert, for the program note spoke of "the aesthetic and ideologic confusion which characterizes romanticism." What Dali has done is to set up an equal confusion in the mind of the spectator.

One missed on the stage the decor which would have pointed up the eccentricities of surrealism evident in the costuming. The incongruities of association, which are the stock in trade of the surrealists, are of course nothing new. They abound, to take two examples, in the paintings of Breughel and in the fantasies of E. T. A. Hoffmann. "Labyrinth" seems to me a perfect illustration of the extravagancies of symbolism into which a theory of art can drive its practitioner.

As long as it is not taken seriously in the least degree, "Labyrinth" aptly serves the purpose of entertainment, for there is not a moment when the real terror of the myth strikes home. A subject which could have been made awesome, even with Schubert's healthy music, has been turned into farce, and the skill of the dances minimized for the sake of tableaux. The technique of Tamara Tumanova was largely wasted upon the antics of Ariadne.

Leonid Miassin participated in the action of "Capriccio Espagnol," the colorful spectacle with which the evening ended. This is a piece that makes descriptive music visible and does not attempt to make ballet an interpretative medium.

Court Clears Gypsum Firms In Trust Suit

Five firms prominent in the American gypsum industry were cleared yesterday of charges of price fixing in violation of the Sherman Anti-trust law, when Justice T. Alan Goldsborough in District Court directed a verdict of acquittal in their behalf.

The directed verdict brought to a close five weeks of trial, in which the Government sought to convict the firms on three counts of conspiring to fix prices before a jury of ten men and two women.

The jurist ruled, however, that the prosecutors had not produced sufficient evidence to support the indictment.

The victorious corporations are the United States Gypsum Co., of Chicago; the Certain-Teed Products Corporation, of New York; the National Gypsum Co., of Buffalo; the Ebsary Gypsum Co., of New York, and the Newark (N. J.) Plaster Co.

Counsel for both sides thanked Justice Goldsborough for his patience throughout the lengthy and "complex trial.

A battery of noted attorneys appeared for the defense in the trial, including former Attorney General William D. Mitchell. Washingtonians among the lawyers were William E. Leahy, William J. Hughes, jr., Ralph P. Wanlass, James O'Donnell, jr., Richard H. Wilmer and Douglas Hatch.

Holdup, Fire Keep Southeast Area In a Dither

Thanksgiving Eve tranquility in the 700 block of Eleventh and Twelfth Streets Southeast was disturbed last night when citizens in the neighborhood ran from their homes to chase a holdup man and then responded to an alarm of fire in a bakery nearby.

The holdup man entered the grocery store of George Cates, 721 Eleventh Street and under threat of death, robbed him of $3. The bandit fled from the shop with Cates following him and shouting. Residents, hearing Cates' cries, ran from their homes and gave vain chase.

An hour later, fire apparatus from all directions clanged and sped to Rice's Bakery, 710 Twelfth Street. It was only a fire in a trash chute.

HELEN O'KEEFE,

30, blonde and pretty, was charged yesterday at Houston, Tex., with the murder of 65-year-old J. C. Franklin, attorney and investment broker whose secretary she had been for 10 years. Franklin's charred body was found in his burned auto on the bank of the San Jacinto River a week ago. Police did not advance a motive for the slaying

G. P. O. Employe Is Given Farewell Party by Chapel

The proofroom chapel of the I. T. U. at the Government Printing Office yesterday held a farewell party for Harry L. Mathias, 6916 Eighth Street Northwest, on his retirement after 27 years of service.

J. W. Moran, chapel chairman, presented Mathias with a purse and Harry Bateman delivered a brief talk.

A native of Newport, Ky., Mathias worked as a printer on several newspapers in that State before securing his appointment in 1914 at the G. P. O. He is the father of six children. A son, Robert (Pat) Mathias, former District Golden Gloves boxing champion, is a sergeant with Company F, 121st Engineers, now on maneuvers near Fort Bragg, N. C.

Youth Withdraws Charges Against School Officers

Francis Carman, Lorton Reformatory inmate, who charged that he was mistreated by officers there, in District Court yesterday, withdrew his efforts to regain freedom.

The request for withdrawal was made in a letter to the Court without the knowledge of his attorney, James J. Laughlin, or Barry Carman, his father, a WPA worker.

Laughlin questioned whether the letter was written of Carman's own free will. Justice James W. Morris, hearing the case, allowed the withdrawal after asking the boy whether he wrote voluntarily and receiving an affirmative answer.

'Shadow of the Thin Man' A Holiday Hit at Palace

Powell, Loy, Asta, Et Al., Score Delightfully In Their Latest and Gayest Crime Comedy; Interesting Short Subjects Augment Ace Bill

THE ONLY THING wrong with this one is the title. If the new there's-been-a-murder business, opening on the screen at Loew's Palace Theater this Thanksgiving—and let there be—morning, is only a "Shadow of the Thin Man," then shadows are built of surprisingly substantial stuff.

This latest of the Mr. and Mrs. Nick Charles adventures, contrived in this instance by Harry Kurnitz from the characters conceived by Dashiell Hammett, has everything of which "shadowy" pictures are not made—its full quota of mysterious killings, a fine head of suspense and enough comedy to cram any theater inhabited by normal funnybones with almost continuous laughter. With William Powell, Myrna Loy, Master Dickie Hall and Asta, most precocious of the pooches, comprising the Charles family, here, for true, is something to be thankful for in the way of holiday entertainment. Or any other day.

The thing gets off to a comedy note. Mr. Charles, handsomely addicted to cocktails and the more sportive aspects of living, is taking his small son, Nickie, jr., for a stroll in the park where the proud paterfamilias reads his eager offspring fairy tales from the racing form. The indulgent Nora agrees that the horse yard would make for a fine afternoon. They arrive at the bullring, after many vicissitudes, just in time to learn that one of the jockeys has only that minute met a violent end. While the cops are trying to run that one down, a young newspaper friend of all concerned is bumped off in the offices of the gambling syndicate during a wrestling match downstairs. Mr. Charles, with the intuitive aid of his spouse, quietly goes about the intricate task of clearing up the whole mess by a series of deductions, duplicities and accidents that are something to see.

All of this, of course, sounds depressingly like a conventional whodunit that adheres to well-worn blueprints. It is no such thing. In his pursuit of the main idea, Director Woody S. Van Dyke has tricked up the whole tangled charade with sure-fire comedy touches that come at most unexpected times and in most unexpected ways. Papa Nick is the daddy of many of these, Nora mothers even more, Little Nickie has his full share and Asta, the wirehaired wizard, is virtually the canine embodiment of Olsen and Johnson, Bob Hope, Red Skelton and the Third Gravedigger. Asta's vast valor is best demonstrated when, after a buildup as a purp always tugging at the leash to chase a tiger, he suffers an ignominious rout by a little black kitten about the size of an inkspot. Nora's high moment comes when she orders a taxi to "follow that car" and it does—without her in it—and again at that rasslin' show. Nick has his great moment aboard a merry-go-round, of all places. These are only the embellishments of a major plot that will not be discussed in these remarks beyond the casual observation that not one in a million will be able to solve it two minutes ahead of the final fadeout.

To these feeble eyes and ears, William Powell and Myrna Loy never before have done such magnificent justice to two of the most engaging characters in modern detective fiction as in this materialized "Shadow of the Thin Man." They are bristling with badinage, gay and goofy, delirious and devoted, under circumstances that would scare the daylights out of most of us. Sam Levene is as gnarled a limb of the law as he was in the stage version of "Margin for Error," and Alan Baxter, Loring Smith, Joseph Anthony and Lou Lubin are pretty cagey on the other side. The secondary "love interest" is nicely handled by Barry Nelson and Donna Reed, and Stella Adler, who comes honestly by her heritage from a gifted acting family, is a particularly malignant "moll" with a police record that would reach from here to there and back again. The reliable Henry O'Neill is adroitly cast as a high city official of inestimable help to Nick in bringing the murderer to ultimate repose in that big chair.

The new short subjects at the Palace are of especial interest to Washington. "The Inside Passage" is a James A. FitzPatrick journey through the natural color beauties of the inland waterway from Seattle to Alaska, and "Triumph Without Drums" traces the career of Dr. Harvey W. Wiley from the Civil War to the passage of the Pure Food and Drug Act in the administration of Theodore Roosevelt. The picturized news completes the supplementaries of a feature that makes an hour and a half seem like five minutes.

Papa Isn't Feeling So Well!

WILLIAM POWELL, MYRNA LOY, DICKIE HALL, all are involved in the consequences of having permitted Papa Nick Charles a ride on the merry-go-round when he should have been running down those murder clews. This would be one of the comedy interludes in "Shadow of the Thin Man," opening today on the screen at Loew's Palace Theater as an A-No. 1 holiday week attraction

Person to Person

New York, Nov. 19.

JOHN L. LEWIS: The President's National Business Advisory Council, which met day before yesterday, decided to present a resolution to the President this week, urging legislation directed against strikes in defense industries. The resolution also will suggest a measure to have a vote taken among workmen, before their union orders them to strike . . . ANPA: The current investigation of Nazi propaganda here has disclosed the fact that George Sylvester Viereck paid at least $300,000 to newspapers, on behalf of the Nazis . . . COL. FRANK KNOX: Work at the Hampton Roads, Va., shipyards has been delayed because of the lack of housing for 700 laborers. Why not send the S. S. Normandie there? More than 700 families can be quartered aboard that ship.

KATHARINE HEPBURN

L. B. MAYER: Katharine Hepburn, who will be starred in the Lardner-Kanin movie, "Woman of the Year," believes that a more commercial title was the one which Lardner's butler suggested—"A Woman a Year" . . . REPRESENTATIVE HAMILTON FISH: The charges against your indicted secretary, Hill, will concern not only some Nazi affiliations but also some matters involving the Japanese . . . CLIFFORD ODETS: Marty Ritt, former Group Theater actor, has the leading role in "Showdown," a Soviet play to be presented by the New Theater of Manhattan this month. The dark-haired Ritt was hired after he promised to grow a full beard, to make him look authentic. For more than a month the dusky actor has been watching his beard develop to its present full-growth. It's an authentic beard—but a deep, colorful red.

GENE TUNNEY: Jack Dempsey has returned from Washington, after arranging for his government assignment. He'll work under Director Kelly, in the program for physical fitness. Jack will make a tour of high school auditoriums and lecture about health and exercise . . . REPRESENTATIVE JOE MARTIN: Wendell Willkie just can't escape the front pages. Last week he tried to find rest by going to his farm in Rushville, Ind. The day after he arrived an army of newspaper men descended upon the town. That's where a Greyhound bus crashed and brought death to some of the passengers . . . ATTORNEY GENERAL BIDDLE: Jim Rowe, the President's secretary, is cleaning his desk at the White House. By today he'll be ready to take over as your administrative assistant.

VINCENT SHEEAN: Dorothy Thompson will have two plaques made for her new house in Turtle Bay. The first plaque will be "Thanks to the Sheeans"—because she bought this house with the insurance money she collected after that fire in the Bronxville home you rented from her. The second plaque will be "Thanks to Hitler"—because all the people who worked on this new house are Nazi exiles . . . JACK DEMPSEY: When will you find time to do that movie for which you will receive $100,000? . . . ELLIOTT PAUL: You're not the only expert nonpro Boogie-Woogie player. Dwight Robinson, economics professor at Hunter and now with the Office of Price Administration, takes boogie-woogie lessons at the Pepper Pot in the Village:

SPEAKER SAM RAYBURN: The House Judiciary Committee, in deciding whether Representative Fish should honor a Grand Jury subpena, stressed the point that there should be no interference with a Congressman's work on the floor of the House. But when Fish was invited to testify, the Department of Justice made it clear that he was to testify in the morning, so that he still could appear on schedule in the House of Representatives

HEDDA HOPPER

Suits Her Thoughts to the Day

Hollywood, Nov. 19.

Now that it's Thanksgiving Day, let's forget fear, and scratch around a little for something to give thanks for.

HEDDA HOPPER

I've been thinking over what's happened here during the past year, and I'm not surprised at finding many things Hollywood has to be thankful for.

First on the list I'd put the fact that so many old-timers have been kept busy this year. Aileen Pringle, Ann Q. Nilsson, Leah Baird, Stuart Holmes, Creighton Hale, Chester Conklin, Maurice Costello, Tully Marshall, James Kirkwood, Alice White, Charlotte Henry, Monte Blue, Hobart Bosworth, Hank Mann, Marguerite de la Motte, Gloria Swanson, Dick Barthelmess, George Bancroft, Antonio Moreno, Ruth Clifford, Dolores Costello, Pauline Garon, Mae Marsh, George Melford, Jack Costello, Bill Farnum, have all been busy in films, and Albert Conti and Gaston Glass, for instance, both have permanent jobs (as wardrobe research expert and business manager in makeup, respectively), at Twentieth Century. And next year I hope their work will be tripled.

We've had the courage to give breaks to lots of talented youngsters. We've gone beyond the stage where we were afraid to try a new name on the public, no matter how much talent went with it. We were underestimating the public's intelligence, and we've admitted it by giving chances to Joan Leslie, Evelyn Keyes (in "Mr. Jordan Comes to Town"), Janet Blair, the little singer whom Columbia is starring in her first picture; Adele Mara, who gets the lead opposite Joe E. Brown; Mary Lee, Alexis Smith, Gloria Warren, Susanna Foster, Betty Brewer, Dolly Loehr, Nancy Coleman, Rex Downing, Ann Todd, Roddy McDowall, Stash Clements, Douglas Croft and many more.

It's a sign we're growing up when we overcome that jealous enmity we used to feel toward stage players. The list of stage actors imported from New York this year would fill a book. There were Dan Duryea, Teresa Wright, and Patricia Collinge in "The Little Foxes;" Joseph Cotten, Ruth Warrick in "Citizen Kane;" Betty Field and Richard Whorf in "Blues in the Night;" Sidney Greenstreet in "The Maltese Falcon;" Josephine Hull and Jean Adair are in "Arsenic and Old Lace;" Monty Woolley, Harry Lewis, Elisabeth Frasier, and Mary Wickes in "The Man Who Came to Dinner;" Victor Moore, Irene Bordoni, Zorina in "Louisiana Purchase;" Florence MacMichael, Mable Paige and Jay Fassett in "The Fleet's In;" Minna Phillips, Regina Wallace, Don DeFore and Ivan Simpson in "The Male Animal;" Van Heflin, Roger Clark, Ruth Ford, Katharine Hepburn, Ruth Gordon (who, I hear, steals the Carbo picture), Sam Levene, Joan Merrill, Millard Mitchell, Ray Collins, Agnes Moorhead, Anne Burr, Richard Bennett, June Havoc, Jack Durant, Bert Lahr, Eddie Bracken, Desi Arnaz, Laird Cregar, Todd Duncan, Jimmy Durante, Ruth Vivien, Elia Kazan.

We're all thankful that Browne and Bioff are out of this business, and the stockholders will be thankful when they're reimbursed for the money those boys collected.

I'm grateful for a closer relationship between the church and pictures. "One Foot in Heaven" brought that about. It looks as if the future may read even better than the past. Anyway, there's hope.

Columbia

Being first at the post always has had something to do with the success of a motion picture, as time and again has been exemplified in the course of cycles that always seem to wane rather than wax. So it is that of all the dramas concerning Britain's airforce that are blowing East From Hollywood, "A Yank in the R. A. F." ought to be able to win the box office stakes by a satisfactory margin. This Tyrone Power feature from Twentieth Century-Fox opens this morning at the Columbia after two previous F Street weeks.

Not that "A Yank in the R. A. F." has only the advantage of being first at the barrier to recommend it. It's a swell action picture, breezily unconcerned, thank goodness, with the philosophies underlying the war, and mounting to magnificent climaxes of aerial battles filmed over England, France and Germany by the R. A. F. Further, for the plot's sake, this Zanuck-produced yarn pits the alluring Betty Grable against the personable Tyrone Power in romantic interludes that well befit two warm-blooded young Americans in wartime London.

The supporting roles are of comparative unimportance, but newcomer John Sutton makes a favorable impression as the young man Miss Grable should have set her dreams upon, and Reginald Gardiner is amusing as a neglected ringside-tabler.

Monty Ain't All

Monty Woolley's full name is Edgar Montillion Woolley.

Little

It is getting downright uncanny the way interest in the Welsh coal mines, as told by Author A. J. Cronin in "The Stars Look Down," continues as the American coal situation itself becomes a defense headache. While the front pages tell the current story, the Little Theater continues its film version of the Cronin novel into a third week.

Michael Redgrave plays the young offspring of a mining family who hopes his study of the law will be of some aid to his people. Margaret Lockwood, in the most unpleasant screen role she has had, acts the young woman whose selfishness hampers him. A distinguished company of British actors, with Nancy Price playing the taciturn mother, supports the leads under the direction of "Night Train's" mentor, Carol Reed.

Barrymoré-ish Humor

John Barrymore, who won undying fame for his Shakespearean roles on the stage, brings some of them to the screen in R.K.O. Radio's "Playmates." Appearing in support to Kay Kyser, the famous actor provides much of the merriment in the filmusical.

Rapid Hire

When the movies discovered Eleanor Parker, it happened in a hurry. She was tested by Warners on a Tuesday, said yes to terms on Wednesday and signed on Thursday.

Eight Rolls, at $274 Mutuel, Wins at Bowie

136-1 Shot Beats Out Favorite

Histronic, Meade Up, Unable to Hold Lead as Long Shot Shows Stretch Rush

By Walter Haight
Post Staff Correspondent.

Bowie, Md., Nov. 19.—Bowie lived up to its reputation as a long-shot track today when it provided the highest mutuel pay-off on a winner this season. Telephone mutuels of $274.50 to win, $48.40 to place and $17.80 to show were hung up after today's fifth race. The medium of the "killing" for a few scattered backers was E. C. Eastwood's Eight Rolls, a 4-year-old son of Rolls Royce and Inela Light.

To the disgust of the favorite players, Eight Rolls drove up in the final strides to win by a nose from the Larch Hill Stable's Histrionic in a photo finish. A length behind the battle for first money came Flying Duke, owned by Mrs. W. H. Denham, to be third in a field of 12 cheap ones going a mile and a furlong.

Sisto Beats Out Meade

Jockey Rocco Sisto, a Washington boy who learned his trade at Charles Town on the Maryland half-milers, booted Eight Rolls into the winning position to hang defeat on Don Meade, the Nation's leading rider for the year. A crowd of 7500 saw the biggest upset of the final campaign in this State.

Eight Rolls had won only one race this year in a dozen tries and had been second twice and third once. He campaigned this fall in New England, running second twice at the Narragansett track. This was the first time Sisto has ridden the horse.

Eight Rolls was off in fair position, but dropped back to tenth at the quarter. Ballast Reef, Aldridge and Candle Ends were the front runners at this stage. At the far turn Histrionic moved up with a rush and finally displaced Aldridge to take command. The favorite players believed the race was over. However, Sisto rallied Eight Rolls and the gelding fairly rolled along on the outside. Five yards from the wire it was anybody's race. Eight Rolls, however, got up in the final lunge.

Two $10 tickets to win were sold on Eight Rolls and one was held by Owner Eastwood.

Birch Rods Runs Fourth

The St. Inigoes Purse, featuring the card, proved a thriller and brought no joy to the backers of the favorite. George D. Widener's Birch Rod, carying most of the play was fourth in the field of six. The winner was the Sanford Stud Farm's Vintage Port, by a neck margin, in a blanket finish that saw Bala Ormont second in the colors of E. D. Saxton and the Christiana Stable's Ice Water third. A claim of foul was registered by Jockey W. Day who rode Ice Water, against Bala Ormont, which came up on the outside and appeared to crowd Ice Water. The stewards listened and finally lighted the "official" sign.

There were no objections to the winner, however. Vintage Port went to the front at the first jump and was never headed while being ridden by Apprentice Jockey L. Hildebrandt who was erroneously reported to have broken his leg in a paddock accident last week. Vinage Port paid $6 and was clocked for the mile and a sixteenth in 1:49 1-5.

Hopkins Is Edged By Swarthmore Eleven, 6 to 0

By the Associated Press

Swarthmore, Pa., Nov. 19.—A third-quarter touchdown gave Swarthmore a 6-to-0 victory over a battling Johns Hopkins eleven today. It was Swarthmore's second game in four days.

Early in the second half, the Garnet was held for downs on the visitors" four, but Hopkins fumbled and Bob Ackerman recovered for Swarthmore on the 15. His pass to Beatty put the ball on the two and Dean Trautman drove over for the touchdown. Hopkins made its only scoring threat in the first period. Lou Stoll ran 23 yards to the Swarthmore 8, but the Garnet took over on downs on the 4.

Rose Bowl Invitation To Either Team Mars Possibilities, Both Undefeated

A battle between the Duke and Duquesne football teams in the Sugar Bowl at New Orleans on New Year's Day is the plan of Sugar Bowl officials, The Post learned yesterday.

In a telegram to Congressman Samuel Weiss, who represents the Duquesne district of Pennsylvania, Sugar Bowl Chairman Abe Goldenberg said:

"Duquesne looks favorable. Duke vs. Duquesne would be a natural."

Congressman Weiss, formerly a star quarterback at Duquesne, has the solid support of Louisiana Senators and Congressmen in his efforts to obtain the Sugar Bowl invitations for Duquesne.

Join in Plea

Joining with Weiss in the plea are Senators John H. Overton, who has an honorary degree from Duquesne, and Allen Ellender. Louisiana Congressmen F. Edward Hebert and T. Hale Boggs have also written Sugar Bowl officials in support of Duquesne.

It is known that both Duke and Duquesne have received feelers from Sugar Bowl authorities. Duquesne last week finished its season, undefeated and untied, with victories over Waynesburg, Niagara, Manhattan, St. Vincent's, Marquette, Villanova, St. Mary's of California and Mississippi State. Duke, also unbeaten and untied, is an overwhelming favorite to defeat North Carolina State in its final game this week.

Rose Bowl Beckons

Any final arrangements for a Duke-Duquesne game at New Orleans, however, will probably be held in abeyance until the Rose Bowl invitations are announced. It is believed that both Duke and Duquesne covet invitations to the Rose Bowl and would probably decline a Sugar Bowl bid if the Rose Bowl beckons.

The bowl situation may be cleared up, finally, next Thursday when unbeaten Texas A. and M. meets Texas University in its final game. A victory over Texas would put A. and M. directly in line for the Rose Bowl. In the event that Texas A. and M. is the choice, the Duke-Duquesne battle would seemingly be assured.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Clark Griffith is going to market three weeks hence and on his shopping list is some sort of a .300-hitting outfielder, a commodity which his Washington club lacked last season. Come to think of it, no wonder the Nats were bogged down in the second division.

POVICH

The chaps who didn't hit .300 in Bucky Harris' outfield were Doc Cramer, George Case and Buddy Lewis. The load was being carried by Cecil Travis and Mickey Vernon. Manager Bucky Harris was getting poor distribution. It's a situation he hopes to correct when he accompanies Griffith to the trade meetings at Chicago early next month.

The situation in the Washington outfield is not improved by Buddy Lewis' induction into the Army. Despite his failure to hit .300, Lewis had the saving grace of power, which Cramer and Case don't boast. And there was always the prospect that Lewis would finish up as a .300 hiter. With Case and Cramer as the only remaining outfield regulars, the Nats are definitely in need of help. We note for the record that Cramer last season hit .274 and Case .266, a pair of averages that, put mildly, are completely unexciting and could be described very much more harshly.

Harris Covets Weatherly

Griffith and Harris aren't going into the trade talks exactly empty-handed. Ken Chase represents healthy trading material despite the fact he won only 6 games last year while losing 17. There are clubs who are known to be definitely interested in Chase, particularly Cleveland for whom he was always tough. That leaves the door open for the Nats to talk about Roy Weatherly, the little outfielder Bucky Harris sort of covets.

Harris would not turn up his nose at Weatherly despite the fact he was only a .289 hitter last season. The little fellow was very unhappy last year when playing for Manager Roger Peckinpaugh who fined and suspended him three times. The year before, Weatherly hit .300 and was one of the better center fielders of the league. Defensively, he would be Washington's best outfielder.

Wetherly's reputation as a recalcitrant does not disturb Harris who, somehow, is never disturbed by that sort. He has handled such temperamental baseball artists as Buck Newsom, Gerry Walker and Ben Chapman without incident and seemingly has a way with them. It has come to Harris' ears that Weatherly would like to play for Washington.

Griffith and Harris are expected also to make another pitch for Chet Laabs, of the Browns. This interest in Laabs is now in its third year, but the Nats have never been able to land him. The strong-muscled Brownie was a mere .280 hitter last year, but Harris has always maintained that he would do better if played regularly. Harris is intrigued, also, by those 15 home runs hit by Laabs last year, more than were hit by any of his own club.

The Nats' rookie crop of outfielders represent a very unexciting lot. There are disturbing doubts, now, among the Nats' bosses, that big Roberto Ortiz will ever be able to hit big league pitching. Bluntly, they don't like his batting stroke despite the tolerable average he maintained in his late trial last season. They like his power, but the fellow would have to be a consistent .325 hitter to offset his clumsiness in the field.

Sanford to Get Shot at Outfield

Neither is Harris particularly fascinated by the thought of playing Bobby Estalella in his outfield. The Nats bought the squat little Cuban back from the Toledo club chiefly as protection against the selective service draft that might claim more Washington players. Estalella was no ball of fire with the Browns who let him go in mid-season. His presence won't diminish Harris' urge to acquire another outfielder.

Under the heading of an experiment, the Nats will attempt to convert big Jack Sanford into an outfielder. That should be at least interesting and, if successful, provide the club with some of the punch it seeks. Sanford has the misfortune to be, by trade, a first baseman on a club that has Mickey Vernon. No place for him on first base. Sanford was a .340 hitter in the Southern Association last year and is willing to play the outfield, a change that was suggested by Harris who approves of the big fellow's speed and throwing arm.

As for Ken Chase, the Nats are seemingly giving up on him. His experience has added up to a six-year tryout with the club, and in his sixth season he compiled his worst pitching record. Chase's case has baffled Harris completely. The Nats' manager has always believed that Chase should have been a truly fine pitcher. Seemingly he does have everything to win with, but the records say no.

Luisetti Star As Phillips Five Triumphs

New York, Nov. 19.—The incomparable Hank Luisetti, former Stanford University All-American basketball star, tonight came back to Madison Square Garden—scene of some of his greatest collegiate triumphs—and led the Phillips 66 Quintet of Bartlesville, Okla., to an easy 39-to-25 triumph over the Ohrbach A. A. metropolitan champions, in the feature game of a double-header here.

Twentieth Century Fox, National A. A. U. champions, defeated Roanoke Legionnaires, 35 to 28, in the first game.

The heralded Luisetti, whose every move was cheered by a near-capacity crowd of 16,123, failed to set any new scoring marks but he played a peerless floor game. Luisetti dropped eight points through the hoops to lead his club in scoring but Hank Beenders, former Long Island University star, scored nine markers to take point honors for the contest.

Ohrbach In Early Lead

The game was close for just about 10 minutes of the first period when the Ohrbach outfit grabbed an early lead and hung on until a field goal by Jimmy McNatt tied the score at the 13-minute mark, a foul shot a few seconds later by Clarence Anderson put the Phillips quintet in the van for good.

Tonight's victors meet the final game of this tournament Monday night. This competition, in which four A. A. U. champions are taking part, launched a six-month Nation-wide celebration of the fiftieth anniversary of the origination of the sport.

The receipts from both double-headers will mark New York's part in the National Memorial planned for the late Dr. James A. Naismith, devisor of the sport.

Roanoke Outclassed

Twentieth Century, which trailed almost throughout the first half, put on a 19-point spurt in the second half to almost completely outclass the Roanoke outfit, A. A. U. Southern Conference champions, who were held to a single point for almost 15 minutes of the second period.

Dale Sears, center for the West Coast outfit, took scoring honors for the game with 10 points on four field goals and two fouls. Hugh Hampton and Bob Spessard paced the losers with 9 points each.

G. W. and Wake Forest Clash Here Today

Game Scheduled for 2 P. M. at Stadium; First Victory Since Opener Sought by G. W.

By Jack Munhall

The football teams of George Washington and Wake Forest meet at 2 p. m. today in a Turkey game at Griffith Stadium, and the victory-starved Colonials will be seeking to carve out their first triumph since whipping Mount St. Mary's in their opener away back in September. It is G. W.'s finale of the season.

This will be the lone college sports attraction of the day, and chances are the Colonials and Deacons will be left pretty much to themselves. What with the Bowie races, the Redskins game in New York and the prospects of a leisurely turkey dinner, they'll be lucky to draw 5000 paying customers.

There is not much glamour about these two teams. The Colonials have won one, tied one and dropped five, while the Deacons have captured four, deadlocked one and dropped four. Still it may be a pretty interesting ball game, especially if the Buff can summon up even a close facsimilie of a scoring punch.

Deacons Have Attack

Touchdowns have been few and far between for your 1941 Colonial eleven—so few that they've scored only in two of their eight games. There is none, however, so brash as to imply that Wake Forest's attack is punchless.

That's the lone saving grace of a disappointing season for the North Carlinians. In nine games they've rolled up 169 points, including 65 against Fort Davis and 52 against Furman—the same Furman team that edged out George Washington, 13 to 6, two weeks ago.

Also, consideration must be given Wake Forest's schedule, which isn't the softest around. The Deacons have beaten the likes of North Carolina (13-0) and North Carolina State (7-0) and have gone down swinging before Duke (43-14), Boston College (26-6) and Clemson (29-0). Since only Colgate has matched the Deacons' feat of scoring 14 points against Duke, this seems evidence enough of Wake Forest's punch.

4 Out For G. W.

The Deacons come here with their squad at near full strength—something that can not be said about the Colonials who will be missing four dependables. Lone Deacon not in tip-top shape is Pat Geer, 6-foot 3-

Eagles Beat Skeeters, 5-1; First Victory

River Vale, N. J., Nov. 19.—The Washington Eagles celebrated Thanksgiving Eve by scoring their first Eastern Hockey League victory, trimming the River Vale Skeeters, 5-1, here tonight before 1500 fans.

Washington drew first blood in the opening period when Paul Courteau took a pass from Foxy Len Burrage at the Skeeter's Blue line and skated in to slip the rubber past Goalie Mel Carey. The score came at 6:28 of the opening period.

The Eagles played strictly a defensive game through most of the opening period, and at its end the statistics showed that only four shots had gotten through to be stopped by Leith Dickie, while Carey had 14 stops for the period.

Play got hotter and tougher in the second period as the Eagles skipped into a 3-1 lead and the first penalty of the game was recorded.

With the period but four minutes gone, Paul Courteau marked up his second goal, one passed from Odie Hallowell and Tom McCormack. Later Courteau was struck by a stray stick and had three stitches taken in his left eye. Twenty-eight seconds later Hallowell slipped the rubber past Carey, on a pass from McCormack. Fred Weaver drew a two-minute penalty for tripping.

Washington.	Position.	River Dale
Dickie	Goal	Carey
Burrage	L.D.	Hewson
Lessard	R.D.	Storey

Second period: (2) Washington—Courteau (Hallowell, McCormack), 4:00. (3) Washington — Hallowell (McCormack), 4:28. (4) Jersey—Ahlin (Edminson), 5:35. Penalty—Weaver (tripping, 2 minutes).

Third period: (5) Washington—Weaver (Ullyott), 7:18; Courteau (unassisted), 9:13. Penalties—Weaver (tripping, 2 minutes), Weaver (roughing, 2 minutes), Goodfellow (roughing, 2 minutes).

Les Hickey Joins Eagles Tomorrow

Coach Redvers Mackenzie and his Washington Eagles have much to be thankful for today following developments of the past 24 hours.

Late yesterday afternoon Owner S. G. Leoffler, sr., received word that Les Hickey, brilliant winger and leading scorer of the Eagles, has been granted his passport and will join them for tomorrow night's crucial game with Pick Hines' bruising and high scoring Johnstown (Pa.) Blue Birds at Riverside Stadium, 8:30 o'clock.

Hickey was key man of the Winnipeg Rangers, Canadian Junior champion a year ago and was recognized as one of the hottest shots in the Dominion.

Johnstown Six Routs Baltimore

Baltimore, Nov. 19.—The Baltimore Orioles opened the 1941-42 ice hockey season on the home rink tonight by losing an Eastern League game to the undefeated Johnstown, Pa., Blue Birds, 4 to 2.

Andy Farkas Faces Double Duty Sunday

Andy Farkas will operate on a free-lance basis between the alternating backfields when the Redskins meet the Giants Sunday in New York.

The most-voiced question of the week has been, "did Farkas really look good when he took that punt back 51 yards for a touchdown last Sunday against the Bears." Well to take a touchdown back more than half the field against the Bears you'd have to look good and Andy's run has given him added confidence.

The former Detroit University flash, who has been a question-mark in the Redskin backfield since he broke his leg last year, will be inserted as a scoring punch in both Sammy Baugh's and Frank Filchock's backfield combinations.

Line-up Not Named

Coach Ray Flaherty has not named his starting foursome but it is likely to be Filchock and Roy Zimmerman, Ray Hare on the wing and Lee Gentry as the blocking back.

Baugh will work with Bob Seymour, Ed Justice, who has looked as good as new in practice sessions the last two days, and Cecil Hare.

Farkas will go in for Seymour and Zimmerman when the occasion makes his presence needed.

The Redskin office closed the local ticket sale for the Giant game at 6 o'clock last night with every one of the 5300 alloted tickets sold. In addition several hundred Washingtonians purchased tickets

Fort Custer, Mich., Nov. 19.—Hank Greenberg, the Detroit Tigers well-paid outfielder, will be discharged from the United States Army Monday, Fifth Division officers announced today.

Greenberg, who has worked himself up to the rank of sergeant since he was inducted May 7, is eligible for release under the War Department ruling providing for discharge of selectees 28 years old or over.

Major Battles Mark Weekend Grid Card

Two Thanksgivings Split Attractions; Saturday's Games Will Hold Spotlight

By Bill Boni,
Associated Press Sports Writer

New York, Nov. 19.—One of the principal effects of the current system of two Thanksgiving Days has been the elimination of both as high points on the college football program.

There will be a rare exception next week, since Texas A. & M. and Texas are paired for the second Thanksgiving. But tomorrow the only game of even slight general interest will be the North Carolina-Virginia duel at Chapel Hill, and that will be interesting chiefly as the final college appearance of Virginia's all-around ace, Bill Dudley.

This Saturday's card, however, furnishes an outsize share of major battles—many of them vital to national rankings, and almost all of them traditional and therefore tough to pick.

To list just a few, unbeaten Minnesota, Notre Dame and Duke will wind up their 1941 scnedules (and will be favored) against Wisconsin, Southern California and North Carolina State; Alabama, the team with the most impressive record in the Southeastern Conference, will attempt to keep it that way against Vanderbilt, and the East will see such ivy-draped classics as the Harvard-Yale and Penn-Cornell battles.

For the next-to-last-time this season, this corner sticks out its badly bruised chin to venture the following forecasts (home teams first and probable attendance in parenthesis on Saturday games):

THURSDAY, NOV. 20

Virginia over North Carolina, which gave its all against Duke; Georgetown over Manhattan; Brown over Rutgers; William and Mary over Richmond; Wake Forest over George Washington; Washington and Lee to shade Maryland; The Citadel over Davidson; Virginia Tech over Virginia Military; unbeaten Utah over Utah State.

FRIDAY, NOV. 21

SATURDAY, NOV. 22

Minnesota-Wisconsin (50,000)—The Gophers may not always play interesting football, but they do play resourceful football and they do keep winning. When you consider their injuries this year, their record is even more admirable—if possible. This should be No. 17 in a row for Minnesota.

Notre Dame-Southern California (55,000)—Resourcefulness is a word that also applies to the Irish under Leahy. Southern Cal has had an extra week to prepare for this, yet the pick is Notre Dame to finish undefeated.

North Carolina State-Duke (12,000)—Duke, which then presumably will sit back and await a bowl bid.

Penn-Cornell (73,000)—The one prediction of which we're proud is a preseason forecast that Cornell, despite the loss of 21 lettermen, would win more games than it lost this fall. Win or lose this one, they already have made sure of that. So saying—Penn.

Michigan-Ohio State (86,000)—

8,000 to See Central Battle Anacostia for School Title Today

Indians Seek First Crown As Underdogs

Central Out to Prove Early Season Triumph Over Foe Not Fluke; Kickoff at 2 o'Clock

A tasty side dish on today's Thanksgiving menu will be the local schoolboy football battle of the year, involving Central and Anacostia and with the public school championship, owned by Western the last two years, at stake.

Some 8000 noisy scholastic fans are expected in the Central Stadium stands at kickoff time, 2 p. m. They'll be there to see one question settled: Was Central's earlier 7-0 triumph over the Indians a fluke or not? And there'll be a lot of good football as a new champion is crowned.

If it's Central, the interhigh series will have the same titlist as in 1938 and in seven other seasons during the last 20 years. If it's Anacostia, the 1941 series will have as its boss a club which has been in competition for only four years.

Pressure on Central

The pressure is all on the host team. An undefeated season lies behind the Vikings, marred only by a 14—14 with Roosevelt. The only undefeated record in town as well as the championship will go by the boards with a Central loss. Its loss to today's foe would ruin an Anacostia record which otherwise includes 6 victories and one tie.

On the basis of material, Central rules the favorite. What Anacostia lacks in numbers and talent, however, it makes up with the scrappiest spirit of them all. The tough little Indians function best against a club which is supposed to be their superior.

Today's outcome can hardly be figured from that earlier meeting of the rivals. In that one a 20-yard aerial which Stan Valanos, fullback, lobbed into End Jack Samperton's arms decided matters. Samperton ran 20 more yards for the game's only touchdown. Otherwise the teams battled on even terms, with neither holding a big margin in any department.

Stars Injured

Both Valanos and Samperton, now injured may see little action today. Valanos, at any rate, will be replaced by Maurice Horton in the starting lineup, with Jimmy Kurz and Mike Denikos handling the halfback posts and Bobby Mess at quarterback. The starting line will be, from left to right: Samperton, Wilbur Rock, Hubert Tucker, George Lavinder, Bill McGrath and Bob Hill.

Anacostia, with triple-threat Bob Nolte definitely out because of a damaged foot, puts all its hopes in Paul Blaine, another all-around ace who has developed into one of the best backs in town this season. Bud Nelson moves into the halfback slot vacated by Nolte, and other starters will be burly Ed Hoffman, fullback, and Frank Burback, halfback.

Ends on the first club in Anacostia's two-team system will be Elmer Leukhardt, an All-Metropolitan selection, and Dick Faircloth. Hulett and Durham will be at the tackles, Bailey and Penn at guards, and Yahraes at center.

Probable lineups:

Anacostia.	Position.	Central.
(11) Leukhart	L.E.	Hill (25)
(15) Hulett	L.T.	Rock (24)
(7) Bailey	L.G.	Tucker (19)
(6) Yahraes	Center	Lavinder (33)
(13) Penn	R.G.	Lawler (31)
(25) Durham	R.T.	McGrath (41)
(8) Faircloth	R.E.	Samperton (12)
(12) Blaine	Q.B.	B. Mess (16)

How to Figure Skate: No. IV

Baptie Explains the Execution of the Inside Backward Edge

Today's lesson deals with the Inside Backward Edge. Picture No. 1 shows the skater—Miss Lillian Tribby, women's instructor at Ice Palace—about to take off. Her arms are starting to swing and her balance leg is to the right for the glide on the right foot. The right, or skating foot, should be well bent for approximately half of the circle and then gradually straightened to complete the glide. In Photo 2, the skater is about one-fourth around the circle with the balance foot raised approximately 10 inches off the ice and carried somewhat inside the print and extended rigidly with the toe pointed down. The hands are now spread apart, with the left arm well inside the circle and the right arm outside the curve to be skated. In Photo 3, the skater has now passed the half-way mark and the balance foot (with closed hip) has passed close to the skating foot. The head has rotated from right to left and the left arm has moved forward over the circle with the right arm and shoulder pressed backward. This position is held until about the three-quarter mark, with the balance foot straightened out in back, counterbalancing with the arms to the right. In Photo 4, the skater nears the finish as the arms rotate to the left and the balance foot, or the left foot, swings back of the skating foot, well outside the circle for the takeoff on the left foot which is skated the same way as the right but in the opposite direction.

Terps Meet Generals In Baltimore

By the Associated Press

Baltimore, Nov. 19.—The starving football teams from Washington and Lee and the University of Maryland meet in Baltimore Stadium tomorrow to carve up a very slim turkey.

Neither has had what might be termed a successful season. The Terps from College Park have won only two games—against Hampden-Sidney and Florida. But that's twice as many as the Generals, who have beaten only Richmond.

The contest, however, shapes up as a worthy battle in a series in which Maryland has the edge with eight victories against five defeats and two ties. It could well be just as even as last year's thriller when Maryland was forced to stage a 99-yard march in the closing minutes to gain a 7-7 tie.

Behind theh line is a fair passing attack, built mainly around a pair of scrappy Maryland brothers—Harry and Joe Baugher. Paul Cavaliere, the General right halfback, is a capable running back, given able assistance by Capt. Bobby Pinck who does most of the blocking from his quarterback slot.

The Old Liners will enter the fray determined to make a shining light of the flashes of offensive brilliance which has spotted their play throughout the season and which showed best in the 13-12 beating they handed a favored Florida eleven.

Elmer Rigby's running, Mearle Duvall's passing, and big Jack Wright's plunging have been the highlights. Duvall will captain the team and call signals. John Coroyack will start at quarterback and do the blocking.

Coach Jack Faber has two better than ordinary reserves who should see plenty of service—Bernie Ulman and Tommy Mont, triple-threat sophomore from Cumberland who held a starting post early in the season.

The probable lineups:

Nelson	L.E.	Alexander
Rulevich	L.T.	Vincent
Craff	L.G.	Morton
Skillman	Center	Wharton
Furman	R.G.	Heyer
Ailor	R.T.	Burtin
Brown	R.E.	Conrad
Pinck	Q.B.	Cordyack
H. Baugher	L.H.	DuVall
Cavaliere	R.H.	Rigby
J. Baugher	F.B.	Wright

Boothe, Navy Back, Is Out Of Line-up

Annapolis, Md., Nov. 19 (AP).—Sammy Boothe, Navy's 190-pound regular right halfback from Evanston, Wyo., hurt his shoulder in football practice and will be unable to play against Princeton Saturday, Headcoach Swede Larson disclosed today.

"It's problematical whether Boothe will play against West Point" (November 29 at Philadelphia), Larson added.

Boothe was injured while returning a kickoff, the mentor said. Phil Gutting, a reserve right halfback, also is injured but may be available Saturday.

Larson said he would start Bob Woods, 184-pounder from Corning, N. Y., in Boothe's position Saturday. To fill the gaps in the right halfback slot, Larson moved Lou Luberda to the varsity from the junior varsity.

This afternoon the Middies participated in a dummy scrimmage with the junior varsity. Only light sessions will be held the rest of the week. The team leaves for Princeton, N. J., early Saturday morning.

To provide contrasting uniforms, Navy will wear white jerseys against the Tigers and the Cadets, Larson said.

The second and third battalion of 1500 Midshipmen and the Academy's 75-piece band will journey to the Princeton game in three special trains.

U.N.C. Attempts Upset Of Favored Cavaliers

Last Grid Game of Career for Va's Dudley; Followers Anticipate Duel With Steve Lach

Special Dispatch to The Post

Chapel Hill, N. C., Nov. 19.—The Nation's third high-scoring team, the most famous "T-model" in the East, and a leading bowl contender, Virginia ruled favorite here tonight, but Carolina was out to make it a scrap—and maybe an upset—if it could maintain its Duke peak.

The 49-year rivals renew Dixie's oldest and most colorful Turkey Day rivalry at 2 o'clock tomorrow, with the series tied at 21 victories each.

The Virginia squad was already here and Coach Frank Murray pronounced the Cavaliers in good shape and ready. Coach Ray Folf planned to star the same Carolina eleven which gave Duke such a scrap, except for one change. Red Benton may start at center for Cocaptain Suntheimer, who, along with several other reserves, was injured in the Duke game.

Last for Dudley

Tomorrow's game was the last chance fans would have to watch the great Bill Dudley, who has been leading the Nation's tailbacks in total offense, or to compare him with Steve Lach, Duke's leader for All-America wingback, and this added angle was expected to draw a near-capacity crowd.

Several thousand supporters, who figure this is "their year," were expected from Virginia, according to word from Alumni Secretary Mac Luck, who opened headquarters for Cavalier alumni at the Washington Duke in Durham tonight.

The returning army of Carolina's old grads, many of whom will regard this as the "big game" of the year, had already started coming in tonight. A ga a Turkey Day program is scheduled for tomorrow, including informal reunions, a special luncheon for Carolina's 1921 team, headed by Capt. Robbins Lowe, cheering sections, and all the trimmings.

North Carolina fans tonight figure Lach was a cinch for All-American. But Virginia followers said Dudley was just as great. "Wild Bill" was out to show the Tar Heels so tomorrow, and the result was expected to be the greatest one-man grid show yet seen here.

Hoyas Given Slight Edge Over Jaspers

By the Associated Press

New York, Nov. 19.—The Georgetown Hoyas, fresh from successive victories over Maryland and North Carolina State to make up for an otherwise disappointing season, will take the field slight favorites over their old rival, Manhattan College, in this city's only major football attraction at the Polo Grounds tomorrow.

With such heavyweights as Ross Sorce, 276 pounds; Al Blozis, 246 pounds, and George Perpich, 218 pounds, on their roster, the Hoyas will boast a big weight advantage over the scrappy Jaspers, who tied Holy Cross, 13 to 13, last week. The game will be the last for 13 Manhattan seniors.

Probable Lineups

Army Host Saturday To W. Virginia

West Point, N. Y., Nov. 16—Army and West Virginia University meet on the gridiron for the first time here this Saturday in the Cadets' final home stand of the season.

Although losing to Penn last weekend (7-14), Army came out of that battle in tip-top physical shape, with the exception of Jere Maupin, fleet back. Coach Earl Blaik expects all regulars to be ready for the West Virginia game.

The Mountaineers will put a strong, and now experienced, squad on the Michie Stadium gridiron this Saturday. Since losing to powerful Navy and Fordham early in the season, West Virginia has come along fast. Coach Bill Kern's squad held mighty Penn State to a one-touchdown victory in its most recent game, and is pointing for the contest with Army.

West Virginia has defeated Waynesburgh (13-7), West Virginia Wesleyan (20-0), Washington and Lee (7-6) and Kansas (21-0), while losing to Kentucky and Penn State in addition to Navy and Fordham.

Army has walloped The Citadel, Virginia Military Institute, Yale and Columbia and held Notre Dame to a scoreless tie, while losing only to Harvard and Penn.

Preview of Army Football Game Winner?

West Point, N. Y., Nov. 19 (AP).—Believe tradition, and you can have the winner of the Army-Navy football game bright and early tomorrow morning—nine days before the service school elevens meet in Philadelphia's Municipal Stadium.

For tomorrow is Thanksgiving Day (F. D. R. variety) and, come Thanksgiving Day at West Point, the "Goats" and the "Engineers" of the second (junior) class at the United States Military Academy get together for what is flatteringly called a football game. The Goats are the cadets who are lowest in academic rank, the Engineers are the bright boys.

And the tradition of this series, almost as old as the Army-Navy rivalry itself, has it that if the lowly Cadets emerge the winners, so will Army in its meeting with the Midshipmen.

Battle for End Spots Tops All-Star Drill

Picking First Wingman for Tobacco Bowl Game Looms as Toughest Job for Coaches

Picking the ends who will travel to the Richmond Tobacco Bowl with the All-Metropolitan schoolboy team November 29 promises to be the toughest job of all, yesterday's drill at Griffith Stadium indicated.

No less than 10 standout wingmen were on hand, despite the fact that stars of Central, Anacostia, Washington-Lee and G. W. High have not turned out yet, all being drilled for title games today. They will take their first practice at the Stadium Friday at 1 p. m., when Coaches Gene Augusterfer and Jim O'Leary again call their squad together after a lay-off today.

He isn't the biggest wingman out, by about 60 pounds, but 135-pound Mel Thompson, of Eastern, will have much to say about who finally gets the end berths on the squad of 30 which will leave for Richmond the twenty-eighth. Thompson worked hard and well yesterday, impressing coaches with his speed and pass-catching ability.

So numerous are ends, as a matter of fact, that Ed Lucas, a rugged and husky performer from St. John's, has been shifted to a guard job. His speed and aggressiveness may come in handy, understudying Henry Grimm and John Mudd, the stars of G. W. High and Woodrow Wilson, who were named on the first team.

Meanwhile, it was also demonstrated that John Grinnell, first-string center from W.-L., is due for a terrific battle for the pivot post from Paul DiMeglio, Devitt's star. The latter has fitted excellently into drills to date.

Don't forget, boys! Next practice is at Griffith Stadium at 1 p. m. Friday.

South America As Ryden Foe Liked by Snead

By the United Press

Miami, Fla., Nov. 19.—A plan to substitute a group of South Americans as competition for the United States Ryder Cup team was heartily endorsed today by Sam Snead, Hot Springs, Va., professional, on his return from a golfing tour of the neighboring continent.

"It not only would aid American solidarity but would stimulate an interest in golf in Latin American countries," Snead said. The United States-British Ryder Cup series was cancelled by the war.

Snead, who with Jimmy Demaret, Houston, Tex., pro, spent six weeks in South America, mostly in Argentina playing exhibition matches, said he believed the country lacked sufficient public courses to develop a large number of great golfers.

Several "younsters" now playing in South American competition probably will develop into promising stars "if they get a break," Snead predicted, adding that most of the "name" professionals there "play a good brand of golf."

Snead and Demaret played in three South American tournaments, Snead capturing the Cordoba Open and his companion winning the Argentine Open.

Local Body To Hold Run

The Washington Athletic Association will sponsor its second annual cross-country run at the Rock Creek Golf Club Saturday, December 6, beginning at 2 p. m.

The course is over turf and bridle paths, with one water jump on the way. Three laps will total approximately 5 miles. Teams will consist of five men, the first three finishing to establish the score. In addition to team trophies, a gold-filled medal will be given to the individual winner and sterling silver and bronze medals to the other places.

Entries close at midnight December 3 with Robert E. Acorn in the Union Trust Building. Entry fees are 50 cents.

Drill Forced Indoors

Brewers, Pro Cagers, Sign Two Players

The roster of the Washington Brewers professional basketball team of the American League was completed yesterday, and ten men—three stars fresh out of college and seven seasoned campaigners—will take the floor tomorrow night at Turner's Arena under command of Coach Mack Posnack in their first game of the season against the world famous Renaissance cagers.

Latest to be signed are George Slott, former St. John's star and one-time teammate of Posnack, and Dave Paris, formerly of City College, who was acquired yesterday in a deal which sent Moe Dubilier to one of the Gotham clubs.

Thus, the Brewers will go into action with Jim Kiernan, last year's leading scorer at Georgetown University; Ben Kramer, Ben Goldfaden and Whitey Wilson as the forwards; Norman Knupple, 6 foot 7 center, late of Panzer Normal College; Irving Rizzi, 1941 Georgetown captain; Nat Frankel, Pete Berenson, Paris and Slott at the guards.

A preliminary game between Jacobsen Florists and Petworth will open the season at 7:30, with the Brewer-Ren game going on at 9 o'clock.

Sportin' Around:

New York, Nov. 19.—Sportin' around:

A Navy-Fordham grid series, beginning next year or the year after at the Polo Grounds, is hot on the fire . . . Paddy Muldoon, the Irish lightheavy who has just come to this country, was mustered out of the Royal Australian air force after bullets from a Messerschmitt perforated his right leg . . . That's a sensible new hockey rule: The one that gives a man tripped by a defense man while in possession of the puck near the cage a free shot at the goal from the point at which he was tripped—instead of from 28 feet out on the ice.

CONSIDINE

Manhattan won't have a chance against Georgetown tomorrow at the Polo Grounds—if the game turns into a track meet. Georgetown has one of the country's great sprinters, Jack Doolan (9.8) in the backfield, and World Champion Weights Man Al Blozis in the line. Blozis would much rather be known as an outstanding tackle than the world's best shotputter and discus heaver. He turned down an offer to go to Notre Dame because the Irish wanted him to stress track, and once threatened to quit Georgetown when he was asked to confine himself to his great forte: track. We haven't seen them all, but he's the best tackle these eyes have viewed this year. The proof of the pudding is that most of the pro coaches have been scouting him for a long time.

There Are Now 133,000 Pin Teams

The American Bowling Congress now lists 133,000 bowling teams in the country, 39,000 above last year's total . . . Warren Wright may have three or four horses in the Derby next spring, if all goes well. Trainer Ben Jones is aiming Sun Again, Col. Teddy, Some Chance, Wishbone and seven maidens at Matt Winn's annual turf classic. Ganging up on Alsab? . . . Speaking of Alsab, the wonder-horse's owner, Mrs. Al Sabath, was seated in the clubhouse at Pimlico the day the $700 bargain horse won the Walden. A lady approached her, and shook her hand. "I'm Mrs. Sloane, owner of Good Goods. Please accept my heartiest congratulations." Good Goods, a nobody at the turf, produced Alsab . . . Another big sports program for the benefit of the country's infantile paralysis victims is getting under way.

Ken Overlin comes back to the garden Friday night to meet Al Hostak, the man Dempsey once claimed had about the hardest punch he ever saw. Ken has fought 13 times this year, and won them all except the once that counted—his fight with Billy Soose for the middleweight title . . . Hal Scadron, manager of Fred Apostoli, writes me that I did Fred harm by wishing out loud not long ago that Fred would quit the ring before he got hurt. Fred's in the shape of his career, Scardron reports, is only 27 and his duties as a bos'n's mate first trade, under the sports command of Lieut. Comdr. Gene Tunney, has made a new man of him.

Norwich Grid Star Obscured

Too darn bad if Texas school authorities penalize Fort Worth's famed Masonic home grid team because Quarterback Louis Burress is a little over the age limit. The orphan kids are favorites to win the State championship. If all their victories are wiped out, as is threatened, it will be an awful blow to a lot of nice kids who have enough trouble. Hope they get the break they deserve . . . Frank Murray, University of Virginia coach, says that his super-senior Bill Dudley "is a better football player than was Ace Parker, George McAfee or Clint Frank, when they were in college" . . . Another outstanding player now being eclipsed by tons of publicity about hot-shots at bigger schools is Norwich's Walter Domina—who'll have to wait until he hits the National Football League, before he stops wasting his fragrance.

Mark Grain, who has a theory that he can improve the muscular functions of race horses 10 per cent, would like to have the use of one for his experiments . . . The Washington Redskins may not be going any place, but the Washington fans are. More than 6000 of them will accompany the team when it travels to New York to meet the Giants Sunday.

If you get around to thanking heaven for anything tomorrow—don't forget to put in a word for sports. Try to picture this country without sports. Could there conceivably be a drearier prospect?

Rockets Beat Hornets In Hockey Match, 5-3

Pittsburgh, Nov. 19 (AP).—The Philadelphia Rockets dented the net for three scores in the second period tonight and coasted to a 5-3 victory over the Pittsburgh Hornets in an American Hockey League game.

It was the eighth reverse in 19 starts for the Hornets.

Pittsburgh scored first in the opening period but the Rockets bounced back and tallied twice before the period was over to set up a lead they never again lost. The three Philadelphia goals in the second period came within three minutes.

Dozen Juveniles Meet in Endurance 'Cap at Bowie Today

Incoming Is Likely Choice in Wide Open Affair; First Race Post Time Is 1 P. M.

A fair brand of 2-year-olds will occupy the feature position on today's holiday program at Bowie. The dozen juveniles will compete for $7500 in added money in the annual running of the Endurance Handicap and with good racing weather predicted the Southern Maryland Agricultural Association expects a crowd of more than 20,000. Post time for the first race is 1 p. m. with the daily double windows closing 15 minutes earlier.

The group in the feature, to be run at a mile and 70 yards, includes one lone filly, the others being colts and geldings. The line-up has the handicappers guessing as this is the most open race of any Maryland stake this fall. Each of the dozen hopefuls has shown speed at one time or another.

Sidney S. Zell's Incoming is the likely favorite in this chief offering for young horses at this meeting. The son of Ladysman and Fib carries the same 112 pounds he shouldered in winning the $2500 added Sagamore Handicap at Pimlico. The track was muddy for that race. Another stake winner in the field is John Dobbs' Chuckle, victor by a head in the Autumn Day Stakes at Empire City. Son Islam, winner of the Jock Purse last Saturday will carry the colors of J. B. Partridge.

Started in 192

No Endurance winner has ever won a derby, but Whiskery, who placed behind Dolan in the 1926 Endurance, went to Kentucky the following spring and won Col. Matt Winn's classic.

Toro, third in the 1927 Endurance, was third the following year in the Kentucky Derby. Sweep All, who won the 1930 Endurance, placed the following spring in the Derby. Therefore one can readily understand why "future book" price makers are always wary of the youngsters, who show speed in each year's renewal of the Endurance.

Inaugurated in 1922, the Endurance has been won by Oui Oui, Tree Top, Sumpter, High Star, Dolan, Sortie, Soul of Honor, Snowflake, Sweep All, Mad Frump, Projectile, Chicstraw, Commonwealth, Bright Plumage, Betty's Buddy, Legal Light, Fenelon and Magnificent in the order named. Snowflake, winner of the 1929 Endurance, holds the time record of 1:45 1-5 for the event.

Dear Al:

Walter Haight, the colt, didn't set the world on fire but he did show some early speed. The effort was promising and maybe he will win a race before the end of Charles Town. Eat your turkey early or eat it late but don't miss the show today. The $7500 Endurance looks like a bang-up race. There was plenty of gloom around the paddock this morning. From Baltimore came the word of the deaths of Frank Walker, trainer for W. L. Brann and John R. (Specs) Dale, valet for Jockeys Eddie DeCamillis and Darrell Madden. Both men died of heart attacks. Ironically, Dale's wife gave birth to a son yesterday at the St. Josephs Hospital in Baltimore. Jockey Ted Atkinson wired from Rockingham Park that his wife has given birth to a daughter at Lawrence, Mass. Scratch time today will be 8 a. m. Only ten favorites clicked in the first 32 races of the meeting. For some time there has been an idea that sprinters cannot win from the No. 1 post position at this track. So far four horses have turned the trick. Jockey Paul Keiper is leading the riders here. Starter John Morrissey will begin schooling horses at Charles Town today. Frank Cronan was down yesterday making his first visit in his new capacity of director of publicity for the West Virginia track. He brought condition books. The best wisecrack of yesterday came from one of the boys in the press box. He said that he saw a fellow buy an across-the-board ticket on Walter Haight. He reported that the fellow appeared to be sane but some man was leading him with a chain. Received a letter from Danny Scocca, the Washington jockey who is at Rockingham. Danny will be down for the Charles Town meeting and if you want a good rider, look no farther. Martin Bletzacker got in from Pascoag, R. I., and took a mount yesterday. By the way, Jockey Leon Garrett was the second leading rider at Pascoag. The horsemen may end the "nerving" racket themselves. Some of them are getting tired of claiming horses and then finding they have been under that operation. See you on the rail.—BILL.

First race—LUPOBA gets the best figure in this field of maiden fillies and I'm going to string along. EL JELIS has been showing promising races and will be a keen factor. CANT WE will be prominent with these.

Second race—ATHELHILDA is reported to be a good one and I'm going to be there. POINDEXTER gets high weight of 117 but is a fit and ready plater. MY LAWYER likes this track and is dangerous.

Third race—DUDIE looks like he is capable of making it two in a row with this kind. Needs only the right handling from Jockey Don Meade. CLINGENDAAL packs much weight but is a threat. PORT WALES has an outside chance.

Fourth race—CIS MARION finds a race that seems to suit purposes. Needs only the right handling. WEATHERITE is better than generally rated and is due respect. COERCION for the show end.

Fifth race—ROUGH MAN seems well placed in this distance affair. Gets only steadying weight and I see no reason for mistakes. BOLD RISK'S last was a good try. HERESHECOMES belongs close with these.

Sixth race—CHUCKLE gets my call in the day's feature. Seems to have a slight edge in an open affair. WOOD ROBIN won over this course and is a threat. INCOMING should be in the cash circle.

Seventh race—HI STY has been shopping around and this could be the spot for a crack down. NAVY'S last was all that could be asked. MAGIC STREAM can better that last.

Eighth race — JUST TOURIST galloped home in front of similar company at Pimlico and should make it two in a row. ERIN'S GIRL has been showing speed and is a possible surprise. EBONY BOY to take care of the others.

Best bet—DUDIE.

Fritzie Zivic Comes From Fighting Family

Five Brothers Have Fought in Ring; Fritzie Meets Furr

By Tony Neri

Not uncommon are brother combinations in sports. Baseball has its DiMaggios, Ferrells and Riddles; football its Osmanskis, Donellis and Hares, and racing can boast the Renicks, Joe and Sammy.

But the prize ring's Zivics of Pittsburgh can outvote any brother group.

Five fighting Zivics have carried the family name into the squared circle, although one member never fought professionally. To present-day fans, Fritzie is the best known. The former welterweight champion of the world is booked to meet Phil Furr in a ten-rounder of Matchmaker Johnny Attell's show at Uline Arena next Wednesday.

The name of Zivic is synonymous with boxing in the hamlet of Pittsburgh. Pete, a bantaweight, first blazed the family monicker across the fistic horizon. Then came Jack, who holds a knockout victory over Lew Tendler. He was followed by Eddie, a lightweight, who beat Tony Canzoneri when the former New Orleans bootblack was on his way to a comeback. And now its Fritzie, the most colorful, and Joe, who never fought as a pro but was a good amateur. He is now a referee in Pittsburgh.

Give Ears Beating

Fritzie and Jackie are the two vociferous members. Although harmless outside of the ring, they never fail to give a listener a tin ear if cornered in conversation. Eddie and Pete, the lesser known fighters, are the most likable, although Fritzie, always looking for fun, is most popular.

Jack won an Olympic title before turning pro. In the paid ranks he knocked out Johnny Ray, Billy Conn's manager, and ended Ray's career as a fighter.

A striking parallel can be taken between Furr now and Fritzie Zivic before he won the title from Henry Armstrong. At that time Fritzie was a hungry fighter as Furr is now. A short time before his meeting with Hammering Hank, Zivic pleaded with Attell, then matchmaker for Promoter Mike Jacobs, for a fight. Attell gave Fritzie a couple of preliminary bouts and finally a shot at Armstrong. All the Zivics have fought for Attell with the exception of Joe.

The story of Zivic's beating of Armstrong is well-known. After winning the crown, he successfully defended it in a return engagement with Armstrong. He then lost a nontitle match to Mike Kaplan in Boston and followed this with a win over Al (Bummy) Davis in a near riot.

The Zivic-Davis fight created such a furore that Davis was suspended "for life" by the New York Boxing Commission. But the suspension was short-lived and consequently the pair was matched again. Davis was then managed by Johnny Attell.

Davis Cup Up

In the return fight Zivic cut Davis to ribbons, winning via a technical knockout in the ninth round. This put Davis out of circulation as a fighter and also put Attell out of the managing business. In his attempt to sign Zivic for the Furr fight here, Attell closed the match after mentioning the double knockout scored by Fritzie over Davis and Attell. But before the fun-loving Zivic signed he made Attell promise to put on one Johnny Como, a Zivic protege, in a four-round preliminary bout. This Attell promised.

Zivic has made the most of his popularity. He bought into several enterprises in his home town. In his fights this year Fritzie has cleared close to $100,000.

FCC Analyst No Communist, Fly Declares

An outright denial that Dr. Goodwin Watson, recently appointed chief broadcast analyst of the Federal Communications Commission, is or ever has been a member of the Communist Party was made last night by Chairman James L. Fly, of the commission, in reply to charges by Representative Dies (Democrat), of Texas.

Answering accusations made Tuesday by Dies that Watson is one in "a new influx of Communists and fellow travelers into official Washington," Fly pointed out that Watson not only spent three years in the Union Theological Seminary but also has since had a "guiding hand" in that institution and in the National Council of the Y. M. C. A.

Watson is also an ordained minister in the Methodist church, Fly said, is of the tenth-generation American ancestry, and since 1925 has been on the teaching staff of Teachers' College, Columbia University, from which he holds the degree of doctor of philosophy.

Dies cited 13 organizations identified as "a list of the party's organizations" and with which he said Watson had associated himself.

Answering this charge in his letter to the Congressman, Fly said his own inquiry disclosed that Watson has been a member of only one of the organizations Dies mentioned—the Consumers Union, in which he was a director—and that this organization is "a well-known agency which conducts research into values and prices of commodities and advises its members thereon."

Of the remaining 12, Fly said, "Dr. Watson has neither been a member of nor actively associated with, nor indorsed," any of them.

Montgomery Fire Destroys Barn, Shed

A fire that swept across the tinder-dry fields of Louis V. Mazza's farm on Old Georgetown Road near the Rockville Pike yesterday destroyed a wheat barn, a shed and threatened an eight-room dwelling house before being brought under control.

Firemen from the Bethesda, Rockville, Chevy Chase and Kensington companies fought the blaze for three hours. They were handicapped by a water shortage and had to depend on pumper tanks.

Mazza said he estimated the damage at between $8000 and $10,000. The barn held 335 bushels of wheat and the shed housed farming machinery and tools, including a tractor, wagon and a gasoline engine.

Ice Palace Bowlers Top Lucky Strike

A downtrodden Ice Palace team currently struggling far down in the second division arose in mighty wrath last night and scored a sweep over the once mighty Lucky Strike men, duplicating Spillway's feat of last week. With the addition of Joe Harrison to the team—who rolled for Spillway up until last week—the Icemen were invincible and posted games of 630-671-596 for an 1897 set. Harrison's 173-430 led the win with Ressa's 367 and Talbert's 362 helping. Hokie Smith was top man for the Lucky Strike team with 396.

Meanwhile Arlington was winning the odd game from Brookland and now are out in front by virtue of a three-game lead. Ollie Pacini led his team to the two victories with 138-396 with Abe Povich high for the Northeast boys with 371. Clarendon, with Gene Hargett's 156-406 and Joe Freschi's 164-428, topped Hi-Skor in two games despite Ed Blakeney's 158-407 and Pantos' 390. King Pin took two from Convention Hall, Rosslyn won two from Georgetown and Fred Murphy's fine set of 442 helped Arcadia take the odd game from Hiser's Bethesda. Spillway won the last two tilts from Penn with Beavers high for the winners after pinfalls of 161-402. Lafayette, with Al Terry banging out a 170-game and 397 set, won the last two games over Hyattsville.

3 D. C. Field Hockey Stars Enter Tourney

Three Washington girls will participate today and tomorrow in the United States Field Hockey Association tournament at Wellesley College. Representing Washington in tournament play is Virginia Junkin, who was named left inner on the Southeastern Reserve team last Saturday at the Southeastern tournament in Sweet Briar, Va. Journeying to Boston with Miss Junkin are Betty Buckley and Eleanor Paul, members of the Washington Field Hockey Association who will participate as substitutes.

Miss Junkin was the star player in a startling upset at Sweet Briar last Saturday. She led the attack for the Southeastern Reserves that put the All-Southeast first team on the short end of a 2-to-1 score Miss Junkin scored both goals on unusual plays that sent her spinning over the goal line after the ball.

This will be Miss Junkin's second trip to national matches, having played at Williamsburg in 1940. An instructor of physical education in the elementary schools, Miss Junkin is a graduate of Beaver College, Pennsylvania. She has been playing with the Washington Field Hockey Association for the past four years and was recently elected to the office of secretary of the association.

Also named to the Southeastern Reserve team, but unable to attend the tournament, is Miss Elizabeth Cooper, captain of the All-Washington team.

Giants-Redskins Game Toss-up, According to Latest Statistics

N. Y. Boasts Slight Offensive Edge, But Locals Seem Bit Stronger Defensively

National League statistics released yesterday in Chicago find the Redskins and Giants as even choices, on paper at least, for Sunday's title-bearing encounter at the Polo Grounds.

Although the Giants have played nine games to eight for the Redskins, average performances find the Eastern title seekers statistically even, with no more than a percentage point separating them in any department.

The Chicago Bears are leading in all offensive departments, total yards gained, yards gained rushing, passing and by laterals.

The Giant-Redskin comparisons:

Av. gain per play	4.05	4.07
Av. gain per rush	2.8	3.04
Av. gain per at'mpt'd pass	6.2	7.2

Weekend Grid Card Lists Major Battles

GRID, from Page 30.

This should be a whale of a fight for runner-up spot in the Western Conference. Michigan.

Vanderbilt - Alabama (22,000)—Since bowing to Tulane, Vandy has played two breathers, while 'Bama has been beating Tulane and Georgia Tech. With each beaten only once, this is a key battle. Albama.

Harvard-Yale (55,000)—After losing its first two starts, Harvard has looked about as good as any team in the East. Harvard.

Fordham-St. Mary's (30,000)—The Gaels haven't galloped much this year and the Rams are eager to get back in the bowl picture. Fordham.

Oregon State-Montana (15,000)—Important only because State now has the Rose Bowl inside track. Oregon State.

Washington-Oregon (25,000)—The Huskies also have a chance to go to Pasadena, though a slimmer one. Washington, but tough.

Princeton-Navy (40,000) — Navy, rested since the Notre Dame debacle.

Kansas-Missouri (20,000)—Missouri to clinch the Big Six title.

Army-West Virginia (20,000)—A flyer on the Mountaineers.

Rice-Texas Christian (15,000)—T. C. U., coming along fast.

Northwestern - Illinois (35,000)—Northwestern, although Zuppke's last game might mean something special to the Illini.

Georgia - Dartmouth (20,000)—Georgia and Frankie Sinkwich.

Here 'n' there elsewhere:

East—Pitt over Penn State, Colgate over Columbia, Villanova over Auburn, Boston College over Boston U, Holy Cross over Temple.

Midwest—Indiana over Purdue, Iowa over Nebraska, Marquette to upset Oklahoma, Kansas State over Iowa State, Tulsa over Drake.

South and Southwest—Georgia Tech over Florida, Clemson over Furman, Mississippi over Arkansas, Tennessee over Kentucky, Mississippi State over Millsaps Southern Methodist over Baylor.

Far West—Santa Clara over U. C. L. A., Washington State over Gonzaga.

Minnesota Fans To Hear Game

A "victory football party" sponsored by the Minnesota State Society will be held at Hotel 2400 Saturday afternoon, with Minnesota and Wisconsin fans on hand to hear the broadcast of the annual Gopher-Badger game. The party will start at 2 p. m.

through friends and relatives in New York and for another year the Washington delegation, band and all, will be over the 6000 mark.

The Redskins will be making their second trip in three weeks to New York but this time the tables are reversed. Whereas the last time the host Dodgers had to beat the Redskins to stay in the running for the Eastern championship, this time the Redskins have to win to retain a mathematical chance for the divisional crown.

With the Bear game aches and bruises in the background Flaherty put the team through a two-hour session yesterday morning in Griffith Stadium and he was well pleased with the results. The Redskins are carrying their "beat the Giants" mood on and off the field and Flaherty is patiently waiting for Sunday at 2 p. m. when he can turn them loose.

Drill Today

Thanksgiving Day will be just another Thursday to the team today although most of the players have been invited to private homes for turkey dinners. They will practice as usual in the morning.

The Giants yesterday brought up an end replacement, Dick Horne, a former Oregon gridder and javelin champion from their Paterson farm. Horne was brought up as replacement for Vince Dennery, who fractured his shinbone and will be out for the season, and Don Vosberg, a little-used end who joined the United States Navy at Norfolk.

Len Eshmont, the New Yorkers' crack defensive back, who missed the Cleveland game with injuries, worked without his limp in the three-hour signal drill yesterday, and Coach Steve Owen was delighted to regain the former Fordhamite as protection against Baugh's passes.

The Redskins have a worry in the new George Franck, Minnesota's All-American of last year, who put forth his most impressive performance of the season last Sunday in the New York 49-14 rout of the Cleveland Rams.

Franck will alternate with Kay Eakin in the starting backfield of Tuffy Leemans, Ward Cuff, who set a new Giant all-time scoring record, and Nello Falaschi.

The second backfield will be Eshmont, Andy Marefos, the mustachioed star of the season's opener here; Howie Yeager, the break-away standpoint of last Sunday, and Dom Principe.

Beaver Dam Club Golfer Posts Par Four After 2 O. B.

Beaver Dam Professional Al Houghton yesterday reported one of the year's hard-way par fours made on the first hole of the Landover layout.

Jay Woodside was off to a bad start by knocking his first two drives out of bounds. He hit his third down the middle and then knocked an eight-iron shot in the cup for a four on the 327-yard hole. Out-of-bounds counts distance only.

C. B. Hartman, Jesse Strong and Jack Palmer all had Woodside by two shots leaving the tee but his four was good for a syndicate.

inch end and one of his team's ace pass receivers. G. W., on the other hand, will be without John Konizewski, 225-pound junior tackle and bulwark of its line; Johnny Picco, an outstanding end; Jim Graham, a sophomore triple-threat back, and Floyd McGlinn, a capable guard.

The injury of Graham, who sprained his ankle in the Bucknell game last Friday, forced Coach Bill Reinhart to shift his backfield, bringing Al Romasco, alternately an end and back, to the right wingback slot. Rounding out the backfield will be Walter Fedora, the 60-minute fullback; sophomore Johnny Pollock, the fleet tailback, and Burnell (Stub) Martinson, senior quarterback.

In Wake Forest, the Colonials will be encountering perhaps the most successful passing team they have encountered. The Deacons, with Red Cochran doing most of the throwing, have completed 50 of 152 passes. Chief catchers of Cochran's heaves have been the injured Geer and Herb Cline and Jack Ciccarelli.

A victory for Wake Forest today would assure it of sixth place in the Southern Conference, and perhaps help them into fifth.

Nanjo Singh Wrestles GeorgeKoverly

Nanjo Singh, the "Cobra Clutch" king, faces another stern test tonight at Turner's Arena when the turbined Hindu tackles the West Coast villain, George (K. O.) Koverly, in the feature one-hour time limit bout.

Singh already has had seven matches locally since his return to this country, and thus far no one has been able to break loose from his deadly clutch.

The only black mark on Singh's escutchoon is a defeat by disqualification at the hands of Pat Fraley, the Pacific Coast champion, who incidentally, will engage Fred Carone, of the Midwest, in a semi-windup battle. Carone is the lad who lost to Koverly a few weeks ago in a hectic struggle.

Koverly, according to Promoter Joe Turner, came to him and asked to be pitted against the Hindu. He said he would have little trouble breaking the clutch.

Fraley, one of the best showmen around these parts, is standing by, anxious to face the winner of the Koverly-Singh bout.

A special 300-minute match is on tap and finds Big Jim Henry (the Green Hornet) engaging Frank Judson, former Harvard wrestling coach. George Bruchman, the "wrestling bartender," a local find, will make his professional bow against Stanley Pinto, and Ace Freeman will open the holiday show in a 30-minute match against Babe Cuddock.

First match is at 8:30.

Welfare Board Again Is Headed By Archbishop

Archbishop Edward Mooney, of Detroit, has been reelected for a second term as chairman of the National Catholic Welfare Conference administrative board, it was announced here yesterday.

MOONEY

Other members of the board of ten, elected at last week's general meeting of American bishops, are Archbishop Samuel A. Stritch, Chicago, vice chairman and treasurer; Archbishop Francis J. Spellman, New York, secretary; Archbishop John T. McNicholas, O. P., Cincinnati; Archbishop John Gregory Murray, St. Paul; Bishop Hugh C. Boyle, Pittsburgh; Bishop John A. Duffy, Buffalo; Bishop John Mark Gannon, Erie; Bishop John F. Noll, Fort Wayne; Bishop Edwin V. O'Hara, Kansas City.

Msgr. Michael J. Ready was reappointed general secretary of the welfare conference, with the Rev. Dr. Howard J. Carroll as assistant general secretary.

National Airport Licensed to Sell Beer and Wine

Air Terminal Services, Inc., operator of the restaurant at the new National Airport, yesterday took out overlapping beer and wine licenses from both the District and Virginia, pending Congressional determination of where the District-Virginia boundary actually is.

Beer and wine will be placed on sale at the restaurant today, provided deliveries are made on schedule, Harold Elliott, general manager, said yesterday. Hard liquor cannot be sold at the airport under Virginia law.

The decision to take out dual licenses will make the restaurant liable to a dual set of taxes, but it is prepared to absorb the extra expense until the question is finally settled, Elliott said.

Beer will be sold for 15, 20 and 25 cents a glass.

In granting the District license to the restaurant, the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board made it clear that it was not deciding the jurisdictional question. The next step seems to be up to Congress.

Winant Deplores European Cities' Fate Under Nazis

St. Louis, Nov. 18 (AP).—United States Ambassador John G. Winant, in a radio address from London to the National Municipal League, of which he is president, tonight traced the plight of cities in Nazi-dominated Europe and declared:

"We don't want our towns and cities shattered—we mean to protect our own.

"I respect the men at home who are trying to keep this crushing brutality from our shores and who dare to move out and fight it."

Addressing the Municipal League's forty-seventh annual conference on government via N. B. C., Wiant named and briefly discussed the fates of great cities now occupied by the Nazis, starting with Vienna.

He concluded that "it will be good to see the Stars and Stripes again in these waters . . . Within its folds lies the promise of American life, and within that promise rests hope for all people everywhere."

Way Is Paved To Tax Income Of 'Foreign' Firms

The way was paved yesterday for local tax assessments against the entire net income derived from sales here by corporations outside the District.

Jo V. Morgan, board of tax appeals, turned down a petition by the Eastman Kodak Co. for reduction of a 1939 income tax levy of $3838.

As a "foreign" concern, the Eastman company contended it was taxed illegally. Morgan's ruling upheld the Commissioners.

Baptist Urges Churches Go 'Crazy for God'

"When the church goes stark crazy for God, it will turn the world upside down," Representative J. Percy Priest (Democrat), of Tennessee, said last night.

He addressed the third day's sessions of the sixty-fourth annual meeting of the District of Columbia Baptist Convention at Fifth Baptist Church, Sixth and a Half and E Streets Southwest.

"The world is upside down tonight," said the Baptist legislator, "because too many people and nations have gone crazy for godless things."

The speaker was introduced by George B. Fraser, layman of Chevy Chase Baptist Church, who was re-elected president of the District of Columbia Baptist Convention of Churches at business sessions yesterday afternoon.

Also named were the Rev. Chandler M. Stith, pastor of Brookland Baptist Church, vice president; William N. Janson, secretary, and Edward N. Janson, assistant secretary, both of Second Baptist Church; S. G. Nottingham, National Baptist Memorial Church, secretary emeritus; Elgin Smith, First Baptist Church, treasurer, and Dr. Rufus W. Weaver, executive secretary. With the exception of Mr. Stith all were reelections.

President Fraser named a committee to study a plan for a headquarters building here, headed by E. Hilton Jackson, of First Baptist Church. Other members are Mrs. James G. Yaden, president of Woman's Baptist Missionary Association; Mrs. George E. Ross, president of the Washington Council of Church Women; Mrs. E. O. Howe, W. W. Everett sr., E. B. Shaver, Robert N. Miller and Dr. Weaver, ex officio.

Other speakers yesterday included the Rev. Edwin H. Tuller, director of the training camp council, Washington Federation of Churches; Col. Alva J. Brasted, former Army Chief of Chaplains; Dr. Thomas J. Watts, executive secretary of the Baptist relief and annuity board, Dallas, Tex.; the Rev. Mike Elliott, editor of the United States Baptist and pastor of Luther Rice Memorial Baptist Church; Mr. Everett, Dr. Weaver, and the Rev. William A. Emmans, pastor of Maryland Avenue Baptist Church.

Patman Meets With Rent Bill Backers Today

The District rent control bill will not receive a Thanksgiving vacation on Capitol Hill. Instead its backers in the House District Committee will meet with the chief opponent of the bill in its present form, Representative Patman (Democrat), of Texas, at 9:30 a. m. today.

Chairman Randolph of the House District Committee reported "definate progress" in smoothing differences following a closed discussion by the two parties yesterday.

It is hoped that a final agreement will be reached at today's meeting, he said. If a satisfactory solution is reached, a joint House-Senate conference on the bill is planned for tomorrow.

House conferees would be District Committee members Representative Schulte (Democrat), of Indiana, and Representative Dirksen (Republican), of Illinois, with Representative Randolph. Representative Patman will be permitted to attend the joint conference in an unofficial capacity, the District Committee chairman said.

Robert Leland, of the Office of Price Administration, conferred with the four Congressmen yesterday.

Balalaika Club Finally Granted Liquor Permit

Controversy over issuance of a liquor-dispensing license to the new Balalaika Club, Russian restaurant, at 1764 M Street Northwest was concluded yesterday when a class C permit was granted by the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board.

Application for the license was made several months ago, but action was deferred because of protests by church interests in the area.

Opposition, however, was finally withdrawn under an agreement with Mischa Bess, owner of the cafe, and issuance of the license was announced by Thomas Lodge, A. B. C. chairman.

Slattery Charges Mistreatment Of REA by OPM

By the Associated Press

Harry Slattery Rural Electrification Administrator, told a House Appropriations subcommittee yesterday that the OPM power branch, "staffed" with private power company officials, had treated REA cooperatives unfairly.

The statement was quickly denied.

The administrator told the group, considering operation of the OPM's copper priorities system, that private companies had foreseen the Government regulation of copper use and had stocked up in advance.

When the OPM clamped down on non-defense copper, including that needed in REA projects, private companies were able to build "spite lines," he said.

"They had staffed the place over there (OPM) and why shouldn't they see it coming?" he asked.

J. A. Krug, chief of OPM's power branch and former TVA official, said he was "rather shocked" at Slattery's assertion that REA had been a victim of discrimination.

Army to Order Vast Quantity of Incendiary Bombs

The Army's Chemical Warfare Service has taken steps for the manufacture of "somewhat under 25 million" incendiary bombs, it was learned last night.

Sealed bids have already been received from private contractors with production of the four-pound incendiaries to start shortly.

The Army order for the bombs—most sizable of its kind—was made necessary, it was said, because vast numbers of the missles are used in actual warfare.

Answers to Quiz

1. North's wisest response with this hand is two diamonds, despite his four cards in partner's suit. Of course, North does not intend to play the hand at diamonds, but he is too strong for a single raise in spades and not strong enough to say three spades. Next time round he will indorse partner's spades suit.

2. Many players would bid three no trump in this situation. South's bid was forcing so North may not pass; with balanced distribution and only a four-card heart suit it may be safer to contract for nine tricks than ten. South will return to hearts as his hand is unsuited for no trump.

D. C. Gas Sales Decline 10% In October

Washington Gas Light Co. yesterday reported October sales shrank 10 per cent to 917,243 m. c. f. (thousands cubic feet) due to unseasonably warm weather during the month. In the same month last year gas sales totaled 1,005,516 m. c. f.

For the first 10 months this year local gas sales totaled 11,661,524 m. c. f., against 11,217,528 in the same 1940 period.

Two Extra Dividends Here

Directors of the Lincoln Service Corporation, Washington industrial banking firm, yesterday declared an extra dividend of 25 cents on common stock and 1 per cent extra on the 6 per cent participating preferred stock.

Regular dividends were declared on the 7 per cent preferred stock, the 6 per cent participating preferred stock and 25 cents on the common stock. All dividends are payable December 12 to holders of record November 29.

The common stock has been placed on a regular $1.25 annual basis, effective January 1. The common formerly was on a $1 basis. This action automatically results in placing the 6 per cent participating preferred on a 7 per cent basis, according to Treasurer Oscar C. Mitchell.

Wool Shortage Seen Acute

The prospect that the 1942 domestic production of wool will be insufficient to meet more than military demands in the United States next year was foreseen by the Research Institute of America, a private business information service which keeps in close touch with responsible authorities.

This outlook for wool supplies is contained in a report, "Priorities and Allocations," designed to show businessmen and industrialists how to cope with defense supply problems through the Office for Emergency Management.

The table, in part, follows:

Commodity	Ratio of supply to civilian requirements 1941	1942
Aluminum	1 to 52	1 to 6
Brass	1 to 3	1 to 4
Cattle hides	1 to 1.1	1 to 1
Copper	1 to 1.2	1 to 2
Magnesium*
Nickel†		1 to 3
Pig iron	1 to 1.1	1 to 1
Rubber	1 to 0.7	1 to 0.6
Silk‡	1 to 3
Wool§	1 to 1.8

*No supply to meet civilian demands.
†No supply.
‡Unknown.
§No supply for civilians.

Officials of the institute said Government plans indicated the available wool supply would be needed for the armed forces next year and that the supply was being limited by lack of shipping space from Australia and by lack of wool processing facilities in the United States.

SEC Head States Views on Private Placements

The Securities Commission told the House Insterstate Commerce Committee yesterday that the securities laws have added little to the cost of floating new issues and that proposals to make private financing subject to registration processes would make slight difference in the trend away from public offerings.

Concluding days of discussion on that point, Commissioner Ganson Purcell said that the SEC did not necessarily favor or oppose the Securities industry's proposal to make all issues subject to the 1933 law.

"The proponents of the amendment have, I think, made it perfectly clear that they hope the amendment will discourage the private placement of corporate securities," Purcell said.

He told the committee:

"The Commission, after a good deal of thought to the subject, does not believe that the proposed section (214), if enacted, will have any material effect upon either the volume of private financing or upon the competitive position of the investment banker. We have concluded that the necessity for registering securities proposed to be publicly offered under the Securities Act is unimportant as a motivating factor in the private placement.

"We think it reasonable to conclude that if an issuer is interested in economy, he will effect that economy by eliminating the investment banker rather than by eliminating such subsidiary considerations as the cost of registration. In other words, it seems clear that issuers are generally less concerned with circumventing the Securities Act than with circumventing the investment banker . . .

"The fundamental cause of the substantial growth in private placements in recent years is that the insurance companies and banks have been faced on the one hand with expanding assets and on the other hand by a constantly contracting field of available investment media."

Later the Investment Bankers Association appealed to Congress to increase the $100,000 exemption on registration of new securities with the Securities Commission in order to remove hardships on small businesses.

Arthur G. Davis, Chicago, field secretary of the IBA, recommending a $500,000 exemption, said that most issues of that amount or less are sold locally and asserted that State laws are "ample and sufficent" to safeguard the public.

Rush S. Dickson, of Charlotte, N. C., said it seemed "distinctly unfair" that the 1933 act should place on an issue between $100,000 and $500,000 the "costly and burdensome requirements of registration" without regard to the success of the company in the past.

The securities industry has asked that the exemption be raised to $500,000; the SEC has expressed a willingness to compromise at $300,000.

Boost in Mattress Prices Rescinded

The Office of Price Administration said yesterday that at its request the Simmons Co. has rescinded a $5 increase in the price of a nationally advertised line of mattresses.

The price boost, made effective by the manufacturer November 3, led to a series of increases by other mattress manufacturers, Price Administrator Leon Henderson said. OPA expects, Henderson added, that cancellation of the Simmons advance will cause the others to return to their old levels.

Henderson complimented the firm on a "very real contribution" to Government efforts to avert inflation, noting that higher mattress prices "inevitably would have disturbed prices for other articles of home furnishings."

U. S. Exports to Britain at New Record

The Commerce Department said yesterday that lend-lease shipments raised merchandise exports to the United Kingdom to a record monthly total of $143,229,000 in September.

This was about $14,000,000—or 11 per cent—more than shipped in August and 30 per cent above the average for the first eight months of the year.

Shipments to Canada, South Africa, Egypt and India declined somewhat in September, so that the aggregate of shipments to the British Empire—$291,000,000—was about 10 per cent less than the record high established in August.

Shipments to Russia also set a new high of $10,951,000 in September, nearly $2,000,000 more than the August figure.

Because of defense program secrecy, no details were available as to what kinds of merchandise were shipped to any particular country, but it was understood that the increase in shipments to England was the result of larger food as well as war material exports.

Comparisons of September foreign trade, by continents, follow: (figures in thousands of dollars, 000 omitted):

Earnings Reports

George A. Hormel & Co. and subsidiary, meat packers, reported net profit for the fiscal year ended October 25 of $1,192,670, or $2.38 a common share, in the preceding 12 months.

Chesapeake & Ohio Railway reports October net income of $7,226,872, against last year's $2,569,143. Ten months' net totaled $33,261,454, against $27,906,172. The road yesterday declared dividends totaling $1.25, bringing 1941 payments to $3.50.

Nickel Plate Railroad reported October net income of $2,003,120 against $656,430 the same month of 1940, bringing the ten months' net income to $9,223,291, against $2,116,429.

Directors of Pullman, Inc., declared an extra dividend of 75 cents a share in addition to the regular quarterly payment of 25 cents on the capital stock, both payable December 15 to stock of record November 28.

Philco Corporation has reported net earnings, exclusive of those of its Canadian subsidiary, of $1,653,047 for the first nine months of 1941, equal to $1.20 per common share, compared with $1,244,159, or 90 cents a share, for the like period of 1940, if the same number of shares had been outstanding.

Third quarter earnings for 1941, exclusive of the Canadian subsidiary totaled $733,939, equal to 53½ cents per common share, compared with 53 cents a share in the like period of 1940. The third quarter figures were erroneously reported yesterday as for the nine-month period.

Richfield Oil Corporation reported net profit for the nine months ended September 30 totaled $3,365,088 after all charges, equal to approximately 84 cents a share on the 4,010,000 capital shares outstanding. This compares with net profit of $3,066,584 or 75 cents a share in the corresponding 1940 period.

Monthly Income Tops 10 Billion First Time

September was the first month in history in which the national income produced in the United States exceeded ten billion dollars, according to the Alexander Hamilton Institute. After seven continuous months of expansion, the national income reached $10,258,000,000 in September as compared with $9,096,000,000 in February.

The national income in September was 44.8 per cent larger than in the same month last year, when it amounted to $7,083,000,000. This expansion brought the total income for the first nine months to $71,397,000,000 this year from $53,638,000,000 in the same period last year, an increase of 33.1 per cent.

Preliminary figures indicate that the national income showed a further rise in October, the institute reported. Industrial activity in October was apparently well maintained at the September rate while it may be assumed that the shipments of agricultural products showed the usual seasonal increase. Although commodity prices showed little further rise in October, they remained firm at the September level.

It is probable, the institute said, that the national income in October represented the peak figure for 1941, since the seasonal tendency is for shipments of farm products to decline during November and December. Nevertheless, it is not likely that the recession in the national income during November and December will be particularly marked. Consequently, it may be expected that the annual national income in 1941 will be close to one hundred billion dollars, as compared with $76,035,000,000 in 1940 and with the previous high record of $82,885,000,000 in the predepression year of 1929.

Expansion of the national income in September was due partly to a rise in the price level and partly to an increase in the quantity of goods produced. The price index reached a new high peak for the war period. Prices in September averaged 17.7 per cent higher than in the same month last year and 22.3 per cent higher than in the prewar month of August, 1939.

The quantity of goods produced in September was the largest on record, with the increase over the volume in the same month last year amounting to 18.7 per cent. Expansion occurred in all the major economic fields. Mining activity in September was 9.5 per cent higher than a year ago. Manufacturing activity showed a gain of 29.4 per cent, while shipments of agricultural products rose 5.5 per cent.

National Steel Votes 25-Cent Extra Dividend

Chesapeake & Ohio Railway declared an extra dividend of 50 cents a share on its common stock, payable December 27 to holders of record December 5. This brings 1941 payments to $3.50. Directors also declared a regular quarterly dividend of 75 cents, payable January 1 to holders of December 5.

Directors of Public Service Corporation of New Jersey reduced the fourth quarterly dividend on common stock from 55 cents to 30 cents "because of reduced earnings due to increased taxes and operating costs and other factors beyond the control of the corporation," Board Chairman Thomas N. McCarter said after a meeting.

Dividends for the first three quarters were 55 cents, making a total dividend of $1.95 per share out of an anticipated earning of approximately $2 a share.

National Steel Corporation directors yesterday declared an extra dividend of 25 cents a share and the regular quarterly dividend of 75 cents, both payable December 12 to stockholders of record December 1. The payments will bring 1941 totals to $3.25, compared with $2.50 in 1940.

Directors of the Atlantic Coast Line Railroad declared a dividend of $1 a share on common stock, payable December 23 to stockholders of record November 29. This becomes the first such disbursement since December, 1937, when $1.50 was paid.

Merck & Co., Inc., manufacturing chemists, declared a dividend of 25 cents and an additional dividend of 25 cents on common stock, both payable December 29 to stockholders of record December 23. The last previous payment was 25 cents on October 1.

Stocks Sprint in Late Deals On Roosevelt's Labor Stand

By the Associated Press

New York, Nov. 19.—The stock market in the final hour today halted its long stretch of stumbling and fumbling with a brisk forward sprint which boosted prices of many industrial leaders fractions to a point or more.

Rated by brokers as a pivotal factor in the turn after three sessions of aimless churning was the news from Washington that President Roosevelt, in letters to steel companies and John L. Lewis, had demanded a settlement of the captive coal strike by either of two methods: having the closed shop issue remain in status quo for the emergency, or by submission of the point to arbitration under agreement the decision would be accepted.

Average Spurts 0.3

Another rift in the labor clouds sensed by speculative circles was the disclosure that a brotherhood representing 45,000 shop workers of the Pennsylvania Railroad had signed an agreement with the company.

Improvement in the list, which started with the steels, lifted the Associated Press 60-stock average .3 of a point, to 39.8. Transactions amounted to 800,960 shares, compared with 678,000 the previous day.

The rally seemed to run counter to precedent in these troublous days. Ordinarily speculative holders of stocks are disposed to lighten up just before a holiday. In this instance, however, it appeared that potential buyers had been impresed by the absence of any sizable selling since the labor unsettlement became acute and thus figured the market had discounted much of the unfavorable labor picture and the possibilities for more adverse events in the Far East.

Domestic news was highlighted by another run of extra and special dividends and a few resumptions.

C. & O. Stock Jumps

Chesapeake & Ohio climbed 2⅛ points and buying was attributed to declaration of an extra dividend of 50 cents. American Can, up 3¼, retrieved yesterdays steep loss.

Commodities were higher. Chicago wheat closed ⅛ cent down to ¼ cent ahead; corn was up ½ to 1 cent. Hogs were steady. World sugar futures advanced widely on reports Cuba had raised the price on the new crop. Cotton futures ended unchanged to 50 cents a bale higher.

Posting better marks in an uneven curb were Glen Alden Coal, Lake Shore Mines and Pittsburgh Plate Glass. Lower were Niagara-Hudson Power of Aluminum of America. Transfers here were about 197,000 shares, against 164,000 Tuesday.

Sugar Futures Leap on Rumors Of Ceiling Boost

New York, Nov. 19 (AP).—World sugar futures jumped about 1/5 of a cent a pound today on speculative rumors that an increase in the ceiling price on sugar was imminent. Domestic contracts rose .04 to .06 of a cent a pound.

The rumors were accompanied by reports the United States had offered Cuba 3.80 cents a pound for her entire 1942 sugar crop—a price 3/10 of a cent a pound above the current domestic ceiling.

These reports said Cuba had rejected the offer as too low and was holding out for 4.20 cents a pound—the equivalent of 5½ cents a pound for raw sugar when duty and freight costs are added.

An additional factor behind the sharp rise in sugar futures quotations was the tension gripping the Far East. Trouble in that area might cut off shipments of Philippine sugar, which normally account for one million tons or about 15 per cent of the United States' annual supply.

SEC Weighs Utility's Plea

By the Associated Press

The Securities Commission took under consideration yesterday a request by Virginia Public Service Co. that it act immediately on a recapitalization plan, rather than proceed with a corporate simplification action previously instituted by the commission.

The recapitalization plan advanced by the company would provide a setup generally in accord with simplification recommendations made by the Commission's Public Utility Division staff. If the commission agreed to act on the company's proposal first, officials said, there already was enough evidence in the record on which to base a decision, and the hearings probably would not be resumed.

Virginia Public Service, a subsidiary of the Associated Gas and Electric System, proposed to issue $22,800,000 of bonds, $5,700,000 of serial notes, 70,000 shares of preferred stock and 628,000 shares of common stock.

Questioned by Robert N. Hislop, Commission attorney, W. E. Wood, Virginia Public Service president, told the commission that he was in favor of listing the proposed new securities on a public exchange and that he believed the bankers might insist or such listing.

The increases become effective December 1, and will be paid quarterly.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Nov. 19 (AP).—Return of wet weather to the Central States grain belt and fixing of the new corn loan rate gave corn and soybeans prices a sharp upward tilt today.

Corn was up as much as 1⅜ cents and soybeans 3¾ cents at times. Wheat and rye followed with gains of about a cent early in the session but later wheat lost all of the advance, due partly to lagging flour demand and preholiday adjustment of trading accounts.

Wheat closed ⅛ lower to ¼ higher, compared with yesterday, December, 1.14½@1.14⅝; May, 1.19⅞@1.19¾. Corn, ½-1 higher; December, 73⅞@74; May 79¾@80. Soybeans, 2½-3½ higher; December, 1.61¾@1.61⅝. Oats, ⅛-⅝ up. Rye, ⅛-1⅛ higher, and lard, unchanged to 5 higher.

New York, Nov. 19 (AP).—Alfred H. Schoellkopf, president of Niagara-Hudson Power Corporation, announced directors had taken no action on a common dividend for 1941 at a meeting held today, because of "uncertainties of the future due to the war situation."

Sugar Futures

New York, Nov. 19 (AP).—World sugar futures advanced to new seasonal highs today on rumors of an upward revision in the sugar ceiling price, holding about half the gains at the close with prices .09 to .105 cent a pound above Tuesday's finish. Sales totaled 20,900 tons.

Domestic futures also made new highs, closing .01 to .06 cent a pound higher on sales of 3600 tons.

Aiding the advance were reports Cuba had turned down an offer of 3.80 cents a pound for her 1942 crop and was asking 4.20 cents.

Ex-Senator's Suit Reported Settled

A $3000 traffic accident damage suit, brought by former Indiana Senator Sherman Minton against operators of a local transfer service, was reported "settled out of court" yesterday on the eve of trial.

The former Senator, now a Federal Judge of the Seventh Circuit Court of Appeals, had filed the suit against Ida and Eugene Kressin, 4400 Eighteenth Street Northwest, and Theodore H. Cohen, 612 L Street Northwest, doing business as the Dime Transfer and Messenger Service.

Judge Minton claimed that on March 15, 1940, a truck of the defendents collided with his car on Massachusetts Avenue near Belmont Road Northwest. He said he suffered a broken finger, shock, and medical and property damage costs.

Edward R. Murrow, who has covered London for C. B. S. since the war's beginning, is on his way home. His ship is expected to dock in New York next Monday, November 24.

Murrow, whose calm "This Is London" has become one of the best-known trade-marks in radio, has not been home since February, 1939. Except for short vacations in England's countryside, the hard-working correspondent has stuck by his London post through all the bombings, all the rationing hardships and all the strain and nervous tension of the most devastating war in history.

He expects to spend a few months resting and lecturing in the United States, while Bob Trout, Columbia's special events star and news analyst, an alumnus of WJSV in Washington, serves in his stead as chief of the C. B. S. European news staff.

Murrow, one of the most scholarly of the American correspondents in Europe, moved into his London post in 1937 from one much quieter. He was Columbia's director of talks in New York.

North Carolina born, Murrow is 37 years old. He is a Reserve first lieutenant in the United States Army—and a "joiner" of learned organizations. Which is to say that he is a trustee of the Institute of International Education, a director of the National Institute of Public Affairs and a member of the Council on Foreign Relations.

Weather Conditions

High pressure continues over the Atlantic States with he center some distance off shore causing continued fair and unseasonably warm weather. The continued slow eastward advance of the low-pressure trough over the Mississippi Valley and Great Lakes region has been attended by rather general moderate to heavy showers from Texas and Louisiana northward to the upper Mississippi Valley and the Lake region during the past 24 hours. Weather has cleared quite rapidly and has turned decidedly colder over the central Plains States, but cloudy, cold weather, with strong northwest winds and light snow is causing near blizzard conditions over the Dakotas and western Montana.
